

(If you haven't read One Screwy Day 35, the following will be SO random).

CALLER: Hello, police?

POLICE: Yes, Constable Smith, here. What are you calling for?

CALLER: I spotted Keema Nan a few minutes ago, but she's disappeared.

POLICE: What, coming out of a helicopter and graffitiing a palindromic number?

CALLER: Yes!

POLICE: Unfortunately, there have been many similar reports, all over the place. It's very hard keeping track of her. Where did you see her, exactly?

CALLER: Over Straight Stream Bridge.

POLICE: There are lots of Straight Stream Bridges, in Charltonham.

CALLER: Of course. Straight Stream Bridge 54.

POLICE: Thank you, that was very clear information.

CALLER: Thanks. The scenery may be boring here, but learn the numbers and you'll never get lost.

POLICE: Touche. Touche.

CALLER: Damn anti-establishment punks need to learn to respect royalty!

POLICE: Couldn't agree more. They're responsible for the most efficient scenery in the world.

CALLER: Do you mind if I make another complaint?

POLICE: Of course not!

CALLER: I know this sounds silly...

POLICE: Go on...

CALLER: After I saw the old lady, I swear I saw some kind of ghost. In the wind, I heard something about salmon. I was really scared.

POLICE: Uh-huh?

CALLER: Then I heard something like 's-s-s-sneaky...'

POLICE: Henry the Sneaky Salmon!

CALLER: Who's that?

POLICE: Don't worry about him. A simple hoover should sort him out.

CALLER: Ok... So you don't think I'm crazy?

POLICE: No! There are lots of ghosts in these parts. Possibly because of a faulty cremation system.

CALLER: What will you do when you catch him?

POLICE: Probably just throw him in the bin. He's a nasty piece of work.

CALLER: Oh my God! I hear the granny now, she's back! She's above me and is shouting '1' over and over! It's turning out to be biggest palindrome I've ever heard!

POLICE: Is she in a green helicopter?

CALLER: Yes!

POLICE: Cover your ears!

CALLER: Why?

POLICE: Just cover them! Palindromes can be EXTREMELY addictive!

CALLER: Ok, I'll put my mobile on the ground...

POLICE: Well done. Just wait.

CALLER: She's gone! I didn't hear anything else!

POLICE: Are you SURE?

CALLER: I'm sure.

POLICE: Ok, good. So you may not need to go to a treatment centre.

CALLER: However... I have just SEEN some palindromic graffiti, haven't I... And I saw some yesterday, too.

POLICE: How long did you look at it?

CALLER: Well... Umm...

POLICE: Yes?

CALLER: It was for quite a while...

POLICE: How long?

CALLER: Two hours.

POLICE: Two hours???

CALLER: The palindrome... It was so beautiful...

POLICE: Of course. I understand. I suggest you leave the area and contact a special rehab centre, ASAP. You'll be fine.

CALLER: Maybe it was three hours...

POLICE: Ok. As I said, I'm sure you'll be ok. Do you have any needs to say a palindrome?

CALLER: I've been fighting it, a little. Five, five, five, five, five. There you go.

POLICE: Me too. One, two, three, two, one.

CALLER: Two, four, seven, four, two.

POLICE: Ok, you need to speak to someone, now. What's your name? I'll book an appointment for you.

CALLER: Oh thank you! My name is... Keema Nan! You've been powned!

POLICE: Huh?

CALLER: Powned!

POLICE: Oh, God dammit!