

Right, it's time for another memory exercise where the goal is to write 'hashtag lol joke' on Twitter after I post a joke one day, 'joke lol' after that, then 'lol joke' and 'joke lol', etc. According to my theory I should do better in the cooler months as my mood is improved then. Let's find out! Also, I've read that Twitter has lost a lot of users since Elon Musk took over. You know why I think that is? I mean look at the logo, it's a bit creepy. It looks like the logo of an evil genius. I can definitely picture a James Bond villain setting up a company called 'X'. No actually, I couldn't because that would be too obvious. Rather it sounds like the company name of a cheaply made B movie bad guy. I say bring back the bird logo and at least PRETEND you're a friendly person. If Elon Musk is indeed a friendly person and not an evil genius as I suggested, I am very sorry. Really. Maybe it will bring you peace of mind when I say I still use Twitter, or as you say 'X'? If you ever make a self-driving car, I'd love to buy one! :)

Now let's go!

Oh wait, there's no point in writing both letters is there? That'll save me some time...

Ah, the first mistake of the month.

The second...

And third... There goes the mood theory, then. Unless I DO do better in the colder months and what's coming up for me at the time of writing this monologue (early Spring) is a load of poo.

Argh!

L

Another mistake. I blame it on the recent stress of going to the dentist.

J

You know I think is going on? I think I was simply overexcited at the time of Twitter postings. Christmas would be coming up and it's hard to think clearly in such times, hence the frequent cockups. And of course, no one likes going to the dentist. The memories are still raw.

According to my notes, I meant to put 'joke' but put 'lol' instead. Dammit. That's even more annoying as it was a pretty good run! Probably nothing to get excited about for the average man on the street, but for me and in the festive period (almost) too? That was incredible... As that was a very frustrating and therefore memorable moment, I thought I'd easily be able to work out the ordering from that day on. At least for a while. Ah, October 28th, the day I wrongly put 'lol'.

J

I guess no.

Ah the first row of threes in November. It had to come sooner or later, I guess.

Alright, I wasn't expecting two triple jokes in one month. It's interesting as things are getting worse for me in the REAL buildup to Christmas... My mistakes are nothing to worried about, all they show is how much I was lovin' life at the time.

J

Ok, I 'cheated' and remembered it was five days ago since I wrote 'joke'. The whole point of the exercise is to remember what you wrote the day before with no clues! For reasons I can't remember, that day was very memorable. God knows why. I should have put that into my notes, too. But I didn't. (On the second draft of this monologue, I've realised why I remembered. Three jokes in a row, isn't it?)

J

Ah a mistake already. I guess I should've seen that one coming.

I keep screwing up, this is anarchy! As anarchy is a word I often use (I almost said it was a favourite word but that could have very easily been taken the wrong way), I'll choose another. Let's Google some synonyms... I'm not sure this post is LAWLESS so let's choose another synonym... How about nihilism? No, that's way too dark. Ah disorganisation. Perfect.

Ok, the overexcitement of Christmas is gone. NOW my brain will be functioning normally.

Right, the only reason my brain isn't functioning normally is because the celebrations are over and I was depressed.

Whoops, I cheated by mistake and looked at yesterday's lols and jokes by accident before posting. Start of the day ruined, I love guessing the ordering! Well, it's love-hate, anyway. On the plus side, no mistake! Then again, if I did make a mistake when posting on Twitter immediately after looking at what order I should place the lols and jokes, I would be SCREWED.

J

J

I was thinking 'I don't care if I make a mistake as I will only be ending a dishonest run'. Then I made a mistake as shown and changed my opinion.

1st of February

Right, the post-Christmas blues are over, the weather is nice and cool, therefore NOW I should be remembering clearly....

Just another of my theories in tatters. No, you know what? Five correct answers in a row? Yeah... I think that's admirable...

The dreaded threes. Not three jokes this time, though. Nice variety!

J

That was particularly impressive how I got that one right as the internet wasn't working until late, meaning I had more time since my last lol and joke ordering and therefore I needed better memory!

Three jokes for a final time? It has to be...

L

Great, it was the last time. Another nice run there, but again I didn't really memorise what I posted the day before on a good five occasions, instead I remembered I wrote 'Joke' five days ago and that's how I worked out the ordering. A very special event for whatever reason. Ahhh the second of April. What a day. The day I blogged about Easter. Remember in a recent blog when I said I wrote four jokes in a row? Thank flip that was a mistake and that never happened. I just did three, praise the lord! To wrap things up, sorry for comparing Elon Musk to an evil genius, but that is one creepy X logo he has, now. I think that's fair enough, bye!
