

Today, I will be ranking my favourite ten Wiedemann Comedy characters from worst to best whilst sharing their personality types, too! I've given MBTI types (or rather Socionics - close enough) to some of my characters a while ago, but largely different characters and things have been revised here with the non-different ones! So it's a completely valid new monologue! I will also be adding enneagram types. Some of the MBTI-enneagram combinations are rather rare which is exciting. Unsurprisingly, the rarer types are given to the weirder characters, it's all scientific, I think. So, in 11th place is... (Sorry, for the inconsistency there, I thought of him at the last minute and wanted to include him). Anyway in 11th place is...

11th: King Woo

ISFP, 9w8 Level of health: 8

I hate to say this ISFPs, but Google calls you the laziest type. (It's ok, in joint last place is INFP, and that's what I am!) Personally, I'd say King Woo is more chronically depressed than truly lazy, though. But yeah, lazy is a fitting word if you're close-minded. 'But Simon, enneagram type 9 is called 'the peacemaker', what's peaceful about ruling a warlike planet?' Well, first up he was a more aggressive '8 wing' and secondly, he tragically had a traumatic childhood he doesn't like to speak of. Despite being a weird king when compared with others, actually the combination of ISFP and 9w8 is far from strange.

10th: Captain Mental

ESFJ, 2w1 Level 2

Still nothing weird, psychologically speaking and I've kept him as an ESFJ. He's nice and likeable which in a way is unusual, as I suspect my dad is an ESFJ. On the whole, a solid police officer but he didn't progress through the ranks as much as he could, as he is more focused on doing the right thing.

9th: Henry the Sneaky Salmon

INFJ, 5w6 Level 5

A rather rare combination there. It does make sense though, as he is both cold (sorry enneagram 5s, that refers to you) and warm, like typical INFJs. Unsurprisingly, I previously called him an INTJ, but if he was such a type, why does he like his pet bird so much? And he really does.

8th: Sexy Moon Bazooka

ENTJ, 1w2 Level 2

Also rare, he's an odd person. He tries to be moral like typical 1w2s and he tries to be a strong leader like ENTJs often are, he's just not very good at his job. He could be less successful though as he has stayed in power for quite some time, and maybe he's (partially) successful because he's just so nice!

7th: The Sausage Roll Killer

INTP, 5w6 Level 7

Strangely not so rare a combination. He's a deep fish too, as you'd expect from 5s. However, as he is evil, he is a 'paranoid, chef-hating mastermind' which Google explains is typical for evil INTPs. (Ok, I added the 'chef-hating' part myself). I previously called him an INTJ which is sometimes also called 'the evil mastermind' but he's not THAT much of a mastermind, is he? I hate to say this, but INTPs are often perceived as more lazy.

6th: Le Poisson Militaire

INTJ, 5w6 Level 6

A typical evil mastermind, this time it's the fact he's a fish that is weird. Famed for already conquering 95% of the world and consistently evading fishing nets, it makes him the world's most fearsome warlord, dwarfing the achievements of Alexander the Great and Genghis Khan. The latter person has countless descendants now, hundreds of years from now, so will the fish.

5th: Keema Nan

ESTP, 3w2 Level 6

Nothing has changed with my ESTP typing here, although I have added an enneagram type too, obviously. A sociable thrill seeker who wants to be the best thrill seeker in the world, and she's certainly getting there. Her rival Peshwari Nan is more or less identical, you'd expect them to be best friends! Maybe they will be one day.

4th: Epic Dave

ISTP, 7w8 Level 5

A man who largely works alone but loves adventure. He's shady too and I don't mean to offend the ISTPs out there but yeah, it is a type associated with criminals. He's a lot of fun, though! In my previous typing I called him an ESTP, but why would such a type have no friends? It make no sense...

3rd: Philip the Angry Gerbil

INTJ, 4w5 Level 6

Another weirdo, an evil mastermind (sorry again, INTJs, that refers to you!) with a more sensitive 4 side. He was previously considered one of the most enigmatic villains of all time, then he took both personality tests and the psychiatrists out there all thought to themselves 'Ahhhh. Of course.'

2nd: James

INFP, 4w5 Level: ????

A troubling thought for all the INFPs, out there. I'm sure most of such people are completely sane. Of course there has been no MBTI type changing here, because James is based on me. I previously said I was an 5w4 though, but I changed my mind. I guess it's weird I had to revise my own personality.

1st: The Dominant Egg (Charlie Baldwin)

ENFP, 7w8 Level 8

A rather typical, hedonistic egg, if unusually mushy. I've certainly got a lot of material out of him, not QUITE as much as James, though. His greatest strength (his fun-loving nature) is also his greatest weakness as sadly he has battled with addiction for most of his life. Charlie, if you're reading this: We all care about you.

There we go, all done. It's annoying how both typing systems have been called 'pseudosciences', but I mean come on, they have to have at least SOME validity, right?? I mean when reading about the various types, not once have I ever thought to myself 'Hm. That's weird.' When I heard the Cancer star sign being described as 'nurturing and empathetic' on the other hand, I DID think it was weird. So there we go, this was a legit article! Bye!
