

I've been working on my site for a good while since I've reviewed music for Metal Rules, and once again I'm getting tired. What do I do? Oh I'll just rank random words again. A tried and tested formula for me, so maybe I should take some risks? I was going to blog about ripping off the gym car park near my doctor (my mental doctor), by illegally using my gym pass so I didn't have to pay, but I thought better of it and decided to post jokes on the day of my psych appointment instead. I could have went to the gym after the checkup which would have been at least KIND of fine, but I didn't feel like it so it wasn't. All in all, the blog would have been too much of a risk, so I think taking risks is overrated. Instead, you got more jokes about thyme AND bees. But no jokes about tar which does make a change. How is this ranking special? I will be reviewing a good 17 words! Not a number you hear every day in rankings is it? It's always top 25, top 10... I like 17. The number one of luck!

Impulse

Coming in at last place is impulse! I can think of lots of times where I've acted on impulse, and not one of them was positive. :S Want an example? Read what I've written about injections. Don't worry, I've never taken drugs. It's just with all the mental health comments, and the stories of me not having a clue what to do, y'know, people could assume the worst. Now I'm an adult on a notoriously potent, extreme and therefore cool brain med? No more impulses!

Provision

'The action of providing or supplying something for use'? Blegh. Do I HAVE to? I guess I do. Sometimes it's not too much of a big deal writing these articles, but it kind of is when I have to talk about some of the things that are coming up... :S

Guess

It's usually best not to guess things. If I guess things nothing too significant will happen most of the time, but you certainly don't want a man responsible for the disarming and disposing of nuclear weapons to think 'Oh, screw it, that'll probably do.'

Inject

Here we go: As with most people, pretty much everything that has been injected into me has been useful. There was one main exception when I saw two wires hanging out of a seat of a rollercoaster ride, I tried to tie a knot with the wires as children often do (that's another thing I genuinely haven't grown out of, now I just play with string :S) and the wires flicked into my finger paralysing me for the rest of the ride! If only my 6 year old self was familiar with the act of suing, the so called theme park would have been so sued by me. Holy moly. I can't remember what theme park it was, but don't worry, it wasn't Thorpe Park or Alton Towers or whatever. (I said that so I wouldn't be ironically sued). I've also been injected and stung by a bee. And of course plain old regular injections often hurt a bit. So yeah, not looking TOO good for injections.

Interrupt

Some people get annoyed by interruptions, my philosophy is to just say the words again. It really isn't too much of a biggie.

Remark

Imagine a world with no remarks! You can still give others instructions and have at least some conversations, you'd just have to be careful not to comment on what people say or look like, etc., that's all. Who would come up with THAT rule? There is oppression and there is a dictator acting mental.

Rub

Rubbing things out is very important. You don't want to say something you'll regret.

Compact

Compact things are cool, I guess, but I actually prefer things to be bigger most of the time. I'm kind of glad mini discs died out of that reason alone. I want my CD collection to be MASSIVE. However, I don't want MASSIVE WIRES FLICKING INTO MY FINGERS!!

Perfume

Change perfume to cologne and things aren't too bad. There's nothing wrong with a man spraying himself with aftershave and sniffing himself, nothing at all. I'm wondering why perfume is for women and Lynx is for men. Did you know male babies used to be dressed in pink and females were dressed in blue? Who's making this stuff up and why? Sounds like there's no real reason to me. By that logic, there is nothing strange about an ultra masculine weight lifter wearing pink dresses and covered in perfume!

Consumer

I've sold three copies of my book to people and I say a huge thank you to all of them! I'm not saying it's easy to live off the about £3 I've earned, especially after about 6 years now, so maybe I should give up my dreams of becoming a writer. I could move to Africa where I sort through rubbish to pick up plastic bottles to sell. If I did that, I'd probably about a million times richer.

Throat

I Googled 'why do you need a throat' and the exact answer to my question was fairly low down. The results higher up said things like 'why would you need a throat culture' and other results listed sore throat symptoms. I guess my question was a bit dumb and obvious, you need a throat for swallowing. I knew that, I just wanted help from the internet to write material and in a weird way, I got it. What's a throat culture though? Let's Google that... Ah a test to check for infections. It's not a society of throats, then. :(

Producer

On average I listen to around three albums a day, so I'd like to give a huge thanks to producers, too. However, whoever produced some of Yngwie Malmsteen's albums has a lot to answer for. Apparently his 'War to End All Wars' was super raw because of money issues, so I'll let that go. However, the guitar tone in 'Odyssey' is REALLY harsh (I've pointed that out before, not because I'm rehashing material, just because I'm still surprised) and 'Attack!!' is pretty much all bass.

Drift

Yeah, I'd like to drift on the water. Sounds like fun! As long as I have those inflatable things on my arm, as I can't swim.

Relative

We've been through this, some relatives are better than others! The hazards of not skipping words, I guess. Jeez. Do I really have to be offensive to my family twice? On average though, relatives aren't too bad, there's just one person spoiling things for everyone else.

Hero

Whatever happened to the heroes? Well, Yngwie Malmsteen kind of faded from the public eye after making some fairly weird production choices, as mentioned. However, The Stranglers sang 'Whatever happened to the heroes way back in 1977, before Yngwie was known. As The Stranglers are still going, maybe they'd like to update their lyrics? Maybe something like 'Whatever happened to Yngwie's sense of taste?' If the extra syllables are a cause for concern for the songwriters, you can keep the same melody and rhythm this way: 'Whatever happened to Yng's taste???' Sorted!

Peace

Ah the feeling I get after the gym; when I eat food; or whenever I listen to the clean intro guitars of Iron Maiden's 'The Clansman', 'Sign of the Cross', 'When the Wild Wind Blows', OR 'Hell on Earth'... etc., etc., etc. That's roughly three hours of peace a day which I think is pretty good!

Content

Content can mean 'peaceful happiness' and it can also mean subject matter. Time for another averaging out. I always like the former obviously, and I almost always like the latter as it's usually me who gets to decide what subject matter I view or listen to. So on average, what a word. I actually feel content for roughly three hours a day. Whether that's actually true or I don't understand the difference between peace and contentment, I'm not sure.

Right! Another fairly normal list from me. If you don't think it is normal, I suggest you read the list from back to front. Imagine if I said I hate contentment, peace and heroes and love impulses, guesses and injections, THAT'S a freak for you. However compact things would still be roughly in the middle! And on that funny note, bye!