

Hello again and sorry for saying that being in the band Karate High School is twice as bad as being in the Vietnam war. It makes you wonder how the musicians behaved. I implied they must have attacked each other constantly with machine guns, bombs, etc., how's THAT for being offensive? It gets worse when I say the Vietnam war was often regarded as pointless. Not only was their constant extreme violence in the band, no one should have been in it in the first place. That would be an intense thing to discuss in therapy, talk about making someone act defensively. It's bad enough talking about symptoms of schizophrenia. Oh how embarrassing. Yeah? Well how about starting a war? And trust me, you WOULD get made to have therapy if you acted like that, it would simply be gross negligence to ignore such behaviour. You ignored a warmonger? You're not even supposed to ignore depression. It would be upsetting if someone said 'I went to a therapist and he told me to wait before I got prescribed meds'. Saying 'I went to a therapist and he told me to wait before he could deal with the case of me starting a full blown war in my own band' would be baffling. I mean there CAN'T be a psychiatric case more extreme than that, either the psych doctor can't be bothered at all or the mental health of the world has REALLY declined.

I get how KHS were a punk band (well pop punk, anyway), but punk bands never went that far, even the most extreme ones. Even GG Allin never attacked his fellow band members with Apache helicopters and B 52 bombers. If he did, people would wonder 'does this person have any respect at all??' There's rejecting authority and then there's being a complete scumbag. GG did have tattoos on him saying 'scum' or whatever, but as the tattoos looked like they were made by a five year old, few if any would take them seriously. If I wrote 'scum' on my face poorly with a pen, people would think I was joking. Little would they realise what I actually meant by the word was that I'm responsible for millions of deaths, just so I could be punk and cool. Do you know what was considered cool before punk music? Waxing your hair and driving around safely in a funky looking car. How times have changed. Whoever it is who is starting the trends of being cool needs to take a long hard look at himself. What an unpredictable loon. What is he going to call 'cool' next? Helping out at the local centre for OAPs? After that he could make blowing up the whole world cool. Idiot.

I also accused the band of being psychopaths when they said 'fear does not exist in this dojo'. Yes, it's true that psychopaths don't feel fear, but having fighters that were scared all the time? Sounds to me like they would kinda suck at fighting. Fear updating your computer sure, I'm scared too, but in a combat situation you need to suppress your feelings and that's fine! You never know though, fear could not exist in the dojo because no one ever goes to it. Annoying for the owner, but having had full scale wars on my mind for a good few hours now, I'm starting to think to myself 'Whatever happened to Happy Days?' Remember that show? I thought it was pretty good. No war there or even fighting. Anyway, lesson of the day, the next time you hear someone being described as a 'scumbag' he COULD just have robbed a shop and told the store owner to take it, which does suck but it could be worse, or on the other hand, something much darker could have happened. What I know for a fact is KHS wouldn't even commit petty theft! :) Great guys! And on that happy note... bye!
