

Simon: Hello again! It hasn't been a while...

Simon: I know. I'm just doing this most likely short interview, because I don't know what else to do, as I wait to get my albums of the month to review.

Simon: Nice rhyme!

Simon: Thanks, it wasn't even intentional. :) Anyway, I thought we could just chill out for a bit and not take things too seriously.

Simon: What's on your mind, then?

Simon: I don't know.

Simon: I see...

Simon: Ok, I'm going to have to delve into my list of ideas I've been building up. What's coming up might not be gold, but I'll have a bash.

Simon: Go on...

Simon: I saw a Youtube advert saying 'This ad lasts 30 seconds, that's how long it takes to book' whatever it was. I was thinking 'No, it lasts 26. Of course it does, that's what it says on the bottom of the screen! You can't miss it.' Not sure what was going on there.

Simon: That was amusing, I suppose. A bit pedantic.

Simon: Swings and roundabouts.

Simon: Any more ideas?

Simon: I read a news article saying 'The country (Canada) has recorded its highest ever temperature - 49.6C.' Doesn't that look like minus 49.6C??

Simon: That's not hot...

Simon: Right, I'm never going there...

Simon: Any more?

Simon: People get told it's not cancer if the new patch is too small, but surely skin cancer takes time to develop? It's not as if a tumour appears in an instant is it? That would be mental.

Simon: Do people get told it's not cancer if the 'new patch is too small'?

Simon: You know this site. I don't believe in checking things.

Simon: Good man. Next...

Simon: Ok, I have one more idea I've been storing...

Simon: ...

Simon: I saw a truck with something like 'Garic - whenever you need us' or whatever it was, written on the back. I was thinking why do people need emergency garlic?? Then I looked harder.

Simon: You know what? I think that will do.

Simon: Thanks.

(A few days pass)

Simon: Hello again! Now you've done your reviews, what's on your mind, now?

Simon: Maybe you'd like to ask me some questions?

Simon: Sure. Do you have any more facts about your uncle?

Simon: Yep. He absolutely HATES scented candles.

Simon: Why??

Simon: No one really knows.

Simon: Ok. How would you describe your life so far?

Simon: Like a darker version of Forrest Gump.

Simon: What's your favourite film?

Simon: Probably Forrest Gump! :D

Simon: What are you most proud of?

Simon: I hold a number of mental health records.

Simon: Uh-huh?

Simon: Yeah.

Simon: You know what? I think I'll stop asking you questions.

Simon: Ok. I read 'Why didn't the allies declare war on the USSR' as 'Why didn't the aliens declare war on the USSR.'

Simon: It's a funny thought that aliens would be interested in the USSR, alone.

Simon: A very interesting sci-fi film... Maybe they don't like communists.

Simon: Do you have any music insights, maybe?

Simon: Doesn't the musical phrase 'notes bleeding together' sound weird to you?

Simon: It sounds very heavy metal/goth...

Simon: Right, but it can apply to any style. Imagine if fans of The Spice Girls knew the band's notes sometimes bled together. It would put them off the group for life!

Simon: Maybe the phrase should be changed to 'scrappy playing'.

Simon: Excellent thinking. I guess that's off-putting too, just not nearly as much. The former is just gruesome.

Simon: Do you have any heavy metal insights?

Simon: I'm listening to Hammerfall, and they have the lyric 'Fight with your heart and you're destined for glory'. It seems to me their interpretations of battles are very strange and extremely romanticised. I like most people, see bloodshed, not people saying to their enemies 'Sorry, but I'm going to stab you. Nice meeting you, at least?'

Simon: I wish that happened.

Simon: Me too. It would make the world an absolutely beautiful place.

Simon: But aliens might not take it seriously, and they could end up invading the USSR.

Simon: Fair point. But then again, maybe aliens would really start to like us and trust us with their own amazing technologies...

Simon: Maybe. But even polite war is still war. And war is scary.

Simon: Oh yeah. Still, maybe they'd give us SOME new technologies, most likely harmless so we don't end up killing each other. Maybe hover cars. I think Russia are trying out basic hover cars. Maybe they got THEM from aliens? Why, I don't know.

Simon: What is it with aliens and Russia/the USSR?

Simon: No idea.

Simon: I think we should end things, here...

Simon: Agreed. I guess it wasn't a mini interview.

Simon: Nope, fairly average.

Simon: Change the title, then?

Simon: Oh Simon. Sometimes I think you don't know me at all.

Simon: Of course. Byeeee.