

I'm getting tired of my site once again so I'm just going to rank more random words. If you thought that was bad enough, guess what I'm doing tomorrow... Yep, I'm going to Staines. At the time of writing on Saturday, anyway. On the plus side, I have spread the writing of this monologue over more than one day, I'm not truly thinking 'screw it' but I am thinking 'screw originality'. Anywho, let's get to it!

15th Cigarette

The cons simply outweigh the pros! I know your lungs are on the inside and therefore the tar in them can't be seen, (unless something goes horribly wrong for you) but the thought alone of blackened lungs disturbs me at least. If you had a rotten brain that would get to you too, because It gets to me.

14th Polite

No thank you... :D

13th Revolution

Some revolutions are good, for example Eddie Van Halen revolutionised the way people played guitar and not one person had to die or be arrested, but sadly most revolutions are bad. Well, I don't THINK Mr. Van Halen caused the death of countless people. If he did, he'd surely get a lot of hate and his reunion with David Lee Roth wouldn't be so eagerly anticipated.

12th Association

Associations sound good in theory, but no company in their right mind would employ me, that's been proven. A few times, in fact. However, association football is ok once in a while. Go England! Of course England never win championships so yeah, still not such a great word. But better than EVH gone bad!

11th Shed

Sheds are ok. Hypothetically speaking would I like a polite shed, though? Or would that ruin things? Just in theory, I mean. Maybe if you write 'thank you' on a shed, that would make it polite. See what happens when I try too hard to come up with material? Things get weird.

10th Tube

Wow, a whole underground travel system? That's incredible. Not only that, I also like tubes of toothpaste and of course best tube ever, Youtube. I also like tubes of Smarties, and even cheese strings that come in tube packages. Interesting, as I hate pretty much all other cheeses!

9th Preparation

Name me one good thing that isn't prepared. Sadly however, preparing is very often boring. My advice: Listen to music whilst doing so, just another of my classic tips for you. Nope 'preparations with music in the background' didn't come up in the online word generator. I'm glad it didn't, as that would be way too specific to me. How would a sweet old lady feel if these words came up in order: 'I am watching you knitting'?? Just saying, that's all.

8th Objective

The world needs objectives! Again, a bit of a pain, but listen to music whilst working and not so bad! Just make sure you're listening to the right kind of music. If you listen to brutal death metal as you're working as a judge and trying to decide what to do to offenders, for example... well, you might come up with ideas that are very unfair to say the least.

7th Wrap

Ah, wrap. I do like wrapping presents. Not be confused with rap music. Interestingly, I have wrapped CDs and CDs are music. Therefore, I've wrapped music. Just a play on words, but I liked it. I've never wrapped rap music, though. Inappropriate for small children!

6th Articulate

Correct articulation is super important. You don't want to intend to say something like 'nice meeting you' but actually say 'nice beating you'. Sounds silly but that's more than possible with only two letters difference, and one of those wrong letters sounding identical as the correct one. You could also say 'rice beating you' which is extremely bizarre, or 'rice seating you' which is equally weird.

5th Evolution

It was pointed out in Alan Partridge how it's better to evolve than 'revolve' (a word meaning revolution that sadly never caught on) and whilst the show isn't based on real events, I have to agree.

4th Effort

Kind of annoying this one, especially if you're tired, but try doing ANYTHING without effort. That's a legit challenge for you. If you can do that you really are a genius. However, unlike all other geniuses, (apart from evil geniuses) you won't be contributing to society in any way whatsoever. I'm picturing a lot of lying in bed. Oh wow you can lie in bed without effort, big woop. You still need to put in some effort to breathe so there is some challenge for you, I'm just saying do something useful.

3rd Beef

Go to the gym, then eat beef. Sounds like a fun day to me. I'm wondering why beef also means 'disagreement'. If anything it should have a positive meaning. Is James Ziegler's favourite food beef because he has beef with everyone? Nope, his favourite food is pizza, just like me.

2nd Faith

My dogs have faith in me and that's adorable. Few people do, which is my own fault really. You know what I really have faith in? Beef!

1st Kinship

You have to put family first, don't you. Not ALL family as explained in a similar monologue, but yeah, definitely some. However, if you DON'T have any family, you can find comfort in the fact you can at least get some beef which is in a very respectable 3rd place! Unless you can't afford beef. Surely you can put in effort at least, which is in 4th? I mean everything everyone does is effort as explained. Get a job, put in a reasonable amount of effort, and then get some beef. And maybe a dog. :)

Right! This article didn't always put me in the best light, but I did redeem myself in the end, I think. I don't know why I put politeness so low down. On self-reflection, I don't think it's normal. However, I would rather be polite than get lung cancer, that's for sure. I know it looks bad at first glance, but to be clear I'd rather be polite than cause a bad revolution, but as explained, some revolutions are good. That's it, bye!
