

I've been feeling a bit tired of writing lately, so I thought I'd just review random words again. Bad idea, many of the words that are coming up next really did trigger the same kind of thoughts I seem to have 24/7. I need more variety! At very least, you'll know what my fears are and I suppose they are irrational. Other than when people look at me and think 'criminal' which does happen. All will be explained. :(Things were so bad in the very early stages of writing, I was thinking of making apology 23. I said sorry just yesterday. But I'll try and rank the words...

15th: Warrant

I'm in trouble with the police?? What did I do?? Oh no. The written documents about stealing Dan's car and bombing it. The countless dozens of documents. The stories of mental illness, and to top it all off tales of me wearing pink dresses during my crimes. I guess it had to come to an end SOME time. For the sake of variety and so I don't need to make another apology, let's talk about something else: Maybe I could talk about hitting someone. No, I'd never do that... Unless... it's Dan and I say sorry to him afterwards. I've apologised to him before, but he didn't believe it. Damn, damn, damn! Hitting Dan is a crime, too!

14th: Revoke

I've been arrested and had something cancelled too? What my gym membership? I thought the message saying 'please be polite' was a joke! I mean come on, people flexing their muscles and bragging about how tough they are? They're asking for impoliteness. Can super well built people run as fast as someone as light as me? Probably not, so I say to such people 'I'm better than you' and I love it. Well, not anymore. -_-

13th: Petty

Ah. I'm only in trouble for petty crime. Not great, but not terrible. What have I done this time, then? Ah, the illegal parking I blogged about. Is bragging about crime another form of crime? Wouldn't surprise me. Maybe it's called 'criminal mischief' I've never known what that phrase meant. When does a prank become a crime?? Don't hit Dan but say you will? No, that's a threat! >:(

12th: Neutral

Phew, neutral territory! Time to relax and think about something other than the negative Dan, I am trying honestly. I'm sure Dan thinks about me a lot, too. I'm wondering what is truly neutral. Maybe water? Nope, you can taste the minerals. When people drink water with the nutrients removed so there is no flavour at all they hate it. 'How could a drink be so bland???' It changes people. Still, better than being arrested.

11th: Brush

You know what? I think I'd rather brush my hair than do something that is truly neutral. A very mild form of exercise. For the sake of being new, why not talk about the opposite of crime? Is that really where my mind first goes to? Breaking the law? I mean come on, warrant, revoke and then petty?! What else am I going to talk about? Can you brush your hair in a pro-police way? Maybe you could brush whilst nodding your head with respect to cops.

10th: Fax

As far as I remember, I've only ever used a fax machine once to send a friend some ideas for band names. However, I could have just handed him such names when I visited him. Instead I kinda wasted both of our time and resources. The parents were like 'What is this supposed to be?' and 'Why am I getting the most random thing on Earth?' It was a bad experience and for that reason I don't think too highly of such devices.

9th: Study

Study hard enough and become a policeman! Study hard enough and go to jail? A horrible thing to say, obviously and luckily it doesn't make sense. Or doesn't it? I'm wondering what subjects criminals appreciate the most. Maybe DT so they could build a ladder to escape? It does happen. I've never liked DT and now you know why, it wasn't because I was bad at it, it was actually because deep down inside I like the thought of dangerous people being nice and snug in jail.

8th: Wrestle

You can wrestle people in a law abiding way! Wrestle criminals! Put on a cape and take the law into your own hands! But what happens when you win the fight and start to feel overconfident? Wrestle the police? No, you've thrown everything away! Until that is you get jailed and wrestle the criminals again. Kind of think a Charles Bronson type person. What why have I ranked Charles Bronson so high? Oh I'll leave it.

7th: Proportion

Now that I've seen the light, 1% of the proportion of the pie chart goes to fulfilling my needs, the rest goes to fighting crime. Sadly some of my needs are parking illegally as explained, but when I'm not doing that, I'm a very creative fighter. I end the fight with my special move 'the Simon slap', it's legendary, non-lethal, yet super effective.

6th: Course

I like travelling! Doesn't matter if it's on a random hill or on a course. Travelling as I bring homemade buns to the local police station. I also drive just a little below the speed limit in my car just be safe as I deliver gateaus and warm spaghetti.

5th: Sell

Please sell me your excellent products, i.e. CDs. Then I can hand them to the police! No that's too far. And I'm glad it's too far for me as it could be considered bribery. I beat up criminals and then the police, then offer the latter CDs? Not looking good is it? So there we go, mine, mine, mine.

4th: Few

What's better than buying things from sellers? Buying rare things that are few! Unless... they're illegal! Certainly sounds potentially illegal at least, right? But not necessarily. Ivory IS though. Luckily no one has ever offered my ivory, nor have I sought it out. (Other than when I got curries from the restaurant 'Ivory Tusk'. Not as shady as it sounds!)

3rd: Breeze

I do love a cool breeze! A cool breeze as I help a policeman cross the road and help with their inquiries.

2nd: Cultivate

I've never considered becoming a farmer and cultivating land, but where would we be without farmers? Super hungry, if not dead. Where would we be without the wind? I have to admit, I don't know. At very least you wouldn't hear leaves blowing which I do think is a shame. I used to like the sound of bird song, but I fell out with the creatures after a long dispute.

1st: Matter

Where would we be without matter, right? It really matters! :D That's a matter of fact! :D :D

To conclude, did you think I'd talk about the same kind of stuff again? No, no, there was a twist. I even ended on three very smiley faces which shows the contrast between last and first place. Such excellent uses of faces removed the need for making the ending sentences longer, I think. So yeah, please, please, please don't arrest me. But for what? Maybe criminal mischief, that sounds like the kind of thing I'd get in trouble for. Google says it's the damage of property? Yep, I'm screwed. Sorry Dan. Criminal mischief sounds so harmless though, the phrase alone is asking for trouble. If I was employing someone and in their background check I found they were arrested for such a crime, I'd just think 'what a character!' And bye!