

Hello. This time I would like to apologise to Usain Bolt for saying he steals shoes and for claiming all rockstars have it in them to steal shoes as well as part of the rock'n'roll lifestyle. It's nothing to look up to, is it? A child would be like 'Wow, look how fast he runs! I want to be just like him and steal shoes one day, too!' Then the parent bans all footage of the athlete, which is good for retail services but gone are the child's motivations which is sad. Similarly, people should be inspired by Eddie Van Halen's legendary technique, not his indulgence in petty crime. It's not petty for the shop owner though, is it? Part of the problem is 'petty thief' sounds so lighthearted, being such a criminal sounds kind of cheeky, if anything. I'd welcome petty thieves in my shop if I had one, in a weird way. What a fun atmosphere, I hope they get charged with speeding too, as 'spee' sounds funny, as does 'ding'. Hang on? I'd lose money!! Therefore people should call such criminals coldhearted robbers, instead. I'm not speaking for everybody, but without the harsher use of language I'd be tricked. Oh sorry, EVH didn't steal shoes either. You may be wondering why I'm so preoccupied with the thought of people stealing shoes... Did someone steal my shoes? No, and I'm not even the slightest bit concerned about someone stealing them, either. Imagine a police officer saying to a crime victim 'I'm so sorry. A burglar has stolen everything in your house.' How weird would it be if the victim responded by saying 'What, my shoes, too??'

Now I'll talk about Della Vega for the tenth time in my site's history, just because it's a nice number. Remember when I said he must really, really value his wrists and must have a genuine fear of falling over? Most people try to protect their heads when they fall, if Della ever fell over, he'd probably crash head first with his hands behind his back, which is a funny image, no? (Have I said that before? If so, only once, not nine times). Anyway, if he did fall like that, he'd probably go into a coma, how would he practice 16 hours a day, then? Gone are his dreams of playing Flight of the Bumblebee at SEVEN hundred bpm. I would say sorry to Della for saying he's wasted his life, but come on, he's an intelligent man, he must know that. At least he doesn't sit around watching TV every minute of the day, but even then, who's going to be more aware of current events than such a person? If Della doesn't watch TV as he practices, he probably doesn't even know what mobile phones are. I'm just saying, as he's a Brazilian guitarist, he will most likely know Sega Master systems are still popular after 40 or so years in the country, so what technologies is he oblivious to other than the latest X Box? He probably doesn't even know who Donald Trump is, his attitude is likely 'I'm a simple man, all I know is Flight of the Bumblebee'. Let's pray he doesn't ever fall over as, well... no more Flight of the Bumblebee.

I think I'm going to apologies to Usain again, just to be on the safe side. (I almost typed 'Uday' then by mistake, why apologise to Uday Hussein??) I previously suggested that as Usain he isn't as active as he once was, he surely doesn't earn as much money as before, giving him a bigger incentive to steal. I'm just saying if I was ever unemployed, my first thoughts would not be 'Let's steal some shoes'. Usain is no different. I'm really sorry if readers were wondering if I subconsciously thought Usain and Uday were similar. Dear God, no. Yes, there we go! Confirmation! A.I. says 'No, Usain Bolt does not steal shoes!' (I must have a weird search history, right?) Again, I nearly typed 'did Uday Hussein steal shoes?' He probably did, but let's check anyway. Yes he did, wow things just keeping getting worse for him, don't they? He actually stole thousands of them or at least got hold of them illegally, which is way beyond petty crime. I bet Nike gave the biggest sigh of relief ever when Uday died, this is weird theory, but maybe Nike assassinated him. And now I have to apologise to Nike, don't I? Sorry Nike, you do not kill people. I'm not apologising to Uday though, that would be mental. I should also point out that falling head first is mental too, so don't do that. My advice? Make sure your shoes are tied up and... that's it! If you don't know about it already, Google the double bow, it's been a favourite of mine for years. And bye!