

Hello! Here come more thoughts on the world of mathematics and I'm sorry, but I do have a warning: You'll need to concentrate hard. I sure did. To start things off, if you've read my previous number systems, you'll know that different numbers mean different things. If not, I'll summarise things, now...

0 = Nothing.

1 = Number one, i.e. the best

2 = Anger (because of terrible twos)

3 = Freedom

4 = Pointless (because it sounds like 'what for?')

5 = 5 stars

6 = Evil

7 = Luck (it means that because it does)

8 = Prosperity (again, I'm not 100% where the association comes from)

9 = No (because it sounds like NEIN!!!)

What makes this monologue different from the prior, is me taking things up a good notch or two. Again, if you've read my prior research, you will know you can mix numbers. If you have the number 12 for example, it will mean 'number one in anger.' If you have 123, it will mean 'the number one of angry freedom'. I'm picturing a psycho living alone in the desert. Now... What does pi mean? Obviously I can't do the whole number as it would quite literally take forever, but how about I do the first 20 digits and analyse that meaning? He goes nothing!

3.1415926535897932385

Freedom from the number one of pointlessness, the number one of five star nothing, anger at the evil five star freedom, five star prosperity, no luck, no freedom, anger at the freedom, prosperous five stars.

So yeah, let's put my thinking cap on, because that's a lot to take in. Right, in my head I'm picturing someone with fairly average pointless levels (if you're curious, a pointless level is how pointless you feel. If you get lost in an area with good lighting and many sign posts, your pointless levels will be high). However, whilst he doesn't FEEL pointless, he has the least possessions of anyone in the entire world! I'd feel pointless in his situation, you have to admire his stoicism. He is a person who hates evil freedom, and I guess evil freedom is the freedom to do what you want, even though it's bad. So we have a very moral poor person. Whilst he is poor, he does have first rate prosperity in another way however, and that is the prosperity of morals. Sadly however, he has no luck and he has no freedom. Poor guy, it seems he's a slave. But a nice guy, and that's all that matters. Of course he's angry at the freedom as he has no freedom. Lastly, he has very good five stars, not because he's rich but because he's nice. That really does have to be pointed out again, because it's cool. So that's what pi is.

Now is a bigger question: WHY does pi mean that? As pi goes on forever and pi is about a good, if poor man, I think it's a sign that goodness in people lasts forever! How about that for an uplifting thought?? You wouldn't want pi to be evil. As is shown, it's anti-evil. There is anger at the evil! And you know what? Having no possessions? That really is very holy, it's the kind of thing Jesus would have preached. Pi, what a number. It's harder to make a case that no freedom is positive, but it's like the garden of Eden. Sure you don't have complete freedom, but it IS paradise. You know what, let's do an analysis of pi's following ten digits!

Oh, another site, a more trustworthy one, says the 20th digit of pi is 4. Not only is the old site philosophically wrong, it also results in poorly drawn circles! So to end the number (for now) we have eight FOUR, meaning prosperous pointlessness. I can see the confusion the wrong site has, how can you have freedom from the number one of pointlessness and also have prosperous pointlessness? I suppose the real version of pi has pointlessness less than the number one. Could be number two, three, four, etc., who knows. Anyway, sadly all that suggests pi whilst moral isn't truly worth your time. To be honest, part of me feels like this monologue has been a waste of time, especially now that I have to update that very well thought out explanation I did earlier. Woe is me.

Anyway, let's do the following ten numbers. We have...

2643383297

... Anger at evil pointless freedom, freedom from prosperity, freedom from anger, no luck.

So, anger at evil POINTLESS freedom, this time? That's a lot of anger at different kinds of evil freedoms. I think that's justified. Freedom from prosperity suggests more anti-materialistic feelings, and because of that there is no more anger!! Makes sense, no? But no luck? I guess that's because you don't need luck when living in such a utopia! That's even more positivity for you. Sure pi isn't perfect, but you can't deny if it was a person, it would be a great guy. A little depressed and bitter at times, but very kind. And on that thoughtful note... bye!