

Hello, this time I would like to apologise to Wiedemann Comedy regular Matt, for saying he snorts drugs live on his show when the camera isn't on him. That's a particularly bad thing for me to say, as he's a teacher. A drug addicted teacher that complains of student's behaviour? Either he's a hypocrite or the children are indeed worse than him and we're going through a true education and legal crisis. Again, it was a misunderstanding. Matt has never complained about students being even more disrespectful than him as he snorts cocaine, I can't even begin to imagine what that would look like. Matt would say something like 'if one more student interrupts me as I do drugs, I will call your parents and tell them exactly what's happened!' That would be a MENTAL thing for someone to say, especially as Matt says you have to be a security guard as a teacher. Again, you'd expect security guards to stop the usage of drugs, not make the problem worse. Matt might as well say he's a secret service agent, specialising in gathering intelligence on drugs gangs whilst high, or 'high on life ;)'. I mean he's ACTING like a teacher, but is he really a teacher or is it a cover? If the latter, he has to be one of the most interesting people on the planet. Not one of the most trustworthy, but there is a film in there, somewhere.

I should also say Matt doesn't do drugs when at home or partying, either. I don't know that as fact as I've never asked him and never will, but I'm 99.9999999999999999% sure he doesn't. You really want me to message him on Facebook about the matter? No! It would be beyond inappropriate! I wouldn't even ask if someone in rehab was addicted to drugs, again, inappropriate. What would I talk about, I wonder? I've never been one for smalltalk, but I'd probably just mention the weather. A nice and safe topic. Matt on the other hand? I'd talk to him about anything! Well, pretty much anything, I wouldn't talk about the possibility he's an undercover spy, addicted to cocaine, that's a subject for a particularly close friend, which I don't have. I could imagine it I guess, but you have to wonder why I would be making such a shady person up in my mind. You may also be wondering why I don't hang around a prison if they're the kind of friends I want to keep. Have, I mean. Not keep, they'd keep going back to jail. At the end of the day, I suppose beggars can't be choosers. Have I ever had a friend that went to jail in reality? Actually, yes. Well a young offenders institution I mean. Personally I thought of him as a cheeky chappy rather than a criminal, that changed when he stole a teacher's car and drove it in a river, boy am I glad I didn't hang around him on that day. Other people seemed to find it funny though, some of the people in my music class wrote a song about the event and it was kinda catchy! Respectful? Not so much. I still remember the lyrics and tune to this day: Neil stole a car, he didn't get too far and now he's going to Feltham!

Now I have the Dominant Egg family with me here, including Charlie, Wendy and Henry Baldwin. They would very much like to say sorry for eating the pistachio overlord donut, crippling this country's military. So Henry and Wendy... Taste good? Henry: 'Just a regular donut, to be honest.' Simon: 'Wow, you've eaten one the country's top generals and it didn't even taste that nice.' Wendy: 'Pistachios are relatively healthy at very least...' Charlie: 'Part of me wishes I had a bite for that reason alone. You're very lucky Henry and Wendy.' Simon: 'Yes, you should try and find the positives in life. Sure, this country will likely be attacked very soon and all because of you, but at least you didn't eat a sugary chocolate donut, right?' Henry: 'The donut was a bit chocolatey, though...' Simon: 'Yes, but it could have been even MORE chocolatey...' Henry: 'Yeah!' Simon: 'I suppose the right thing to do would be bake another pistachio donut and teach it military tactics...' Charlie: 'Yes, that idea was recently discussed on James's' radio show, it's just that we wouldn't even know where to begin!' Simon: 'Let me help you, this is important. Right, you COULD explain to the donut that we have tanks, fighter jets, battleships, etc. what their uses are, their strengths, their flaws, their costs, etc. and just like that, you have a donut for the rest of the world to fear.' Wendy: 'I guess maybe I could find the time, it's just with Henry here, I need to look after him...' Simon: 'In a way, teaching Henry and the donut such things is a form of home schooling, which is perfectly legal. My advice? Raise a military egg, too. Teach the evil fish who's boss'. Charlie: 'Yeah!' Simon: 'Right, this is a hefty paragraph, let's end things now, bye!'