

Ben: Hello listeners! This time we've actually been told NOT to talk about Lego as James has done something he needs to apologise for. Right now.

James: I stole and crashed Dan's car again, but this time I got into trouble.

Dan: And would you like to explain why it's been reported you're a 25 year old? You really can't stop lying can you, what gets to me is the lie doesn't ever matter!

James: Actually, that was because I look young for my age. I mean that's something?

Dan: What do you mean?

James: Less need for skin care products!

Dan: You use skin care products?

James: Yes, on my hair.

Dan: Why?

James: Because it's not supposed to go on your hair. Fight the power!

Dan: What?

Ben: You don't really have a relationship with a sock do you?

James: About that, sure the CCTV LOOKED like I was kissing a sock and that I was really into it, actually it was once a person. You know what Latin phrases can do...

Dan: Someone chanted 'turn into a sock' in an ancient language and it worked?

James: Right.

Dan: I have SO many questions for you...

James: Good.

Dan: First up, when will you get me a new car?

James: When?

Dan: Yeah.

James: I don't think I ever will get you a new car...

Dan: No you will. How about you give me your car?

James: But someone set it on fire...

Dan: I'm assuming that was you...

James: Sure was.

Dan: And why did you do that?

James: I don't know!!!

Dan: Stop crying. When you once said you were faking insanity in the police interview and that you were making the conversation with the sock up... Why did you say that?

James: The sock told me to say that. It wants to be ignored. It's very shy.

Dan: Will you write to the sock now it's in prison for assaulting a psychologist?

James: Yes.

Dan: Why?

James: Look it wasn't a proper assault, the psychologist just passed out for a couple of minutes and had a funny taste in his mouth. No biggie.

Ben: No biggie? How would you like a sock in your mouth?

Dan: He'd probably like that.

James: Maybe, but ONLY if it was a person beforehand.

Ben: I see...

Dan: You have one weird personality, James.

(A phone rings)

Ben: Hello, caller?

Caller: It's the sock...

Dan: No way...

Caller: Can I speak to James, please?

Dan: Please do.

Caller: Can you send my some fabric softener please?

James: Yes, but please end this call, people are laughing at me.

Dan: No, I don't think so.

Caller: Being in prison isn't all bad you know? It's quite exciting being inside of a washing machine...

Dan: Hahahahaha!

Ben: Please! You're killing me!

Caller: Also, can you write to the prison staff about washing me properly? I'm starting to shrink.

Dan: Hahahahaaaaa!!

James: Argh.

Caller: And can I have some nice snug shoes, please?

James: No.

Dan: You've hung the sock up!

Ben: You're clearly feeling very awkward. Would you like to talk about something less embarrassing?

James: Yes.

Ben: What was it like joyriding Dan's car?

James: No, that WAS good.

Ben: Why?

James: Just the thought of stealing something from him made me feel alive, but driving his car THAT fast? Amazing feeling.

Dan: Yeah, well now you're going to jail!

James: I'm not in jail NOW am I?

Dan: I was wondering about that...

James: Wonder no more.

Dan: What happened then?

James: I was given some medication after another psychologist found me to be insane, I said I'd turn over a new leaf and here we are.

Ben: I don't believe you.

James: Yep.

Dan: Was he an idiot?

James: The thing is, lots of crazy things have been happening lately that even the smartest people can't make sense of. Talking socks, people turning into pizzas, would it really be so crazy to think I was mad?

Dan: How did you act insane, then?

James: I quacked for three hours straight. It was very tiring, but the rewards were there.

Dan: What were you diagnosed with?

James: Duck psychosis. It's very rare.

Ben: And what are the symptoms of duck psychosis? What causes it?

James: The symptoms are believing you are a duck. It's believed hanging around with ducks too much causes it.

Ben: But no one is sure?

James: No. As I said, very rare.

Dan: But you don't hang around with ducks...

James: I've given bread to ducks before. Not my bread, your bread, I stole it from your cupboard, but still it was bread.

Dan: Does the condition have any other symptoms?

James: Crashing cars!

Dan: And what does crashing cars have to do with ducks?

James: It's a mysterious condition. No one knows for sure.

Dan: Are there theories?

James: Ducks are birds, and therefore are related to dinosaurs. They're very angry creatures. Jealous, too, especially of cars. I mean your car was so fast, so comfortable, so filled with gadgets. Well it was I mean.

Dan: Are they jealous of people with regular girlfriends?

James: For the last time, the sock who just phoned this station USED to be human! What do you want me to do? Tell it to go away? I'd do that to you, but never a sock.

Dan: So socks mean more to you than me?

James: Put it this way: How many people are in the world called Dan?

Dan: A few million?

James: And how many socks are there in the world?

Dan: Billions?

James: ...

Dan: You think you've made a point?

James: Sure I have. There are more socks, because socks are more useful.

Dan: That was you trapping me?

James: Yes.

Dan: There are lots of ants in the world. Are ants more useful than you?

James: Errrr...

Dan: I've won, haven't I?

James: How many ants are called 'James'?

Ben: Don't answer that, Dan.

Dan: What do you think will happen if I crash YOUR car?

James: You wouldn't dare.

Dan: I will, I'm going to today. Then I'll claim I have Dan psychosis, and an idiot will believe me. What then?

James: You'll probably be put on medication too.

Dan: I bet it sucks being on medication. I bet it has really bad side effects. How's THAT make you feel? The fact that I've won?

James: It's not true, the medication makes me feel better...

Dan: I'm warning you James.

Ben: Well would you look at that, we're all out of time.

James: And not the herb! Thyme, I mean! Ha!

Dan: Everything's just one big joke to you isn't it?

James: No.

Dan: Well that's something.

James: Only joking.

Dan: Right. Well if everything's a joke, that must mean you're a joke, too?

James: Well as Ben said, time up... so... there's not enough time to hear my super witty... epic... ness.

Dan: I win! I win!

James: No wait!

Ben: Too late, James.

James: No, You see, you're a...