

Simon: Hello! You've written a few jokes now, have you ever written any that suck?

Simon: Yep.

Simon: Can you give me an example?

Simon: Errr...

Simon: It's ok, I won't laugh.

Simon: Are you trying to be clever?

Simon: I'm sorry. What I mean was, it's ok, I won't judge.

Simon: Ah.

Simon: Maybe you'd like to start with jokes that aren't TOO bad, so you don't feel too uncomfortable?

Simon: Good idea. Here's an idea I had for a Christmas joke contest... (The winner of which, will get their gag placed inside real life Christmas crackers!): What do dead people say on the 25th of December?

Simon: What?

Simon: Merry stiffness!

Simon: I think that's a bit too dark to be in a Christmas cracker...

Simon: Exactly my concern.

Simon: No elderly person wants to read that. Maybe you'd like to share a joke that isn't very good?

Simon: I have a joke that's hard to understand...

Simon: Go on...

Simon: What do you call a liquid settee?

Simon: Yes?

Simon: A paradox.

Simon: Errr...

Simon: Told you.

Simon: What's it mean, then?

Simon: Well, 'set' means hard, doesn't it? How can something be liquid and hard.

Simon: Ohhhh, yeah.

Simon: A good joke, then?

Simon: No, I don't think so. You should never need to explain a joke.

Simon: Here's one: What weather always comes first? Wonned.

Simon: As in 'he wonned the race'?

Simon: Yeah.

Simon: -_-

Simon: And then there's 'Why are bats so energetic? Because they live in batteries'.

Simon: That's not a bad joke...

Simon: Yes, but it's similar to some of my others. People may ask what my obsession with bats is about. They might conclude I'm bat (expletive) crazy. That's not what I want at all.

Simon: Despite your writing style?

Simon: Exactly, exactly.

Simon: Next!

Simon: This joke HAS to have been done before: What do sheep say when visiting the doctor? 'Baaaa.'

Simon: Google?

Simon: I think it might be original...

Simon: :)

Simon: What about this?: What's the difference between fate and a physiotherapist? One's destiny, the other's a test-a-knee.

Simon: Hm.

Simon: You don't like that one?

Simon: It might be better if physiotherapists only worked with knees. And even if they did, calling someone a 'test-a-knee' sounds very strange. Knee tester, maybe.

Simon: What's the difference between fate and a physiotherapist? One's destiny, the other's a knee tester.

Simon: Yeah, that was awful.

Simon: Why are polar bears so artistic? Because they take polaroids.

Simon: Taking photos is a kind of art, I guess. How many of these kinds of jokes do you have?

Simon: Maybe a hundred. Here's another paradox: 'Which writing equipment is most paradoxical? The ball point pen.' How can a ball be pointed???

Simon: That would be insane. Still, scrap it.

Simon: What do you call a dangerous journey about maths? An add-venture.

Simon: I say keep that one.

Simon: Agreed. And then there's 'What religion did Ian follow when he was reasonable to Italian food? Pasta-fair Ian-ism.'

Simon: Simon! That's not bad either!

Simon: Two jokes saved?

Simon: Yeah!

Simon: I'm on a roll! What about 'Why couldn't Jose smoke in the drought? Because of the Jose pipe ban.'

Simon: A bit random, but it works! I think.

Simon: Yes! :D How about 'Why did the change draw on the leg joint? Because it was a pen knee'.

Simon: Don't you mean 'knee pen'?

Simon: Why did the change draw on the leg joint? Because it was a knee pen.

Simon: I don't mean to depress you, but it was better before. That version was actually baffling.

Simon: Who gave the microphone to Alan? Mike AI.

Simon: There we go! That actually made sense, you DO have it in you. I say keep it. I'm not saying it's HILARIOUS, but it is a joke, technically speaking.

Simon: Is it funny?

Simon: Ummmm... It's not necessarily witty, but I think it qualifies as a form of wit.

Simon: Woo.

Simon: This interview is really up and down, isn't it?

Simon: Sure is. A real rollercoaster.

Simon: Next?

Simon: Why do maths-based gym lessons spread Lyme disease? Because of the math mat tics.

Simon: What the hell is a maths-based gym lesson?

Simon: You've never had one?

Simon: No...

Simon: It's where you exercise (on mats) whilst doing sums.

Simon: You've made that up, haven't you?

Simon: Sure did. :)

Simon: Well, until the day maths-gym classes become a thing, it's best to keep that joke secret.

Simon: Another downer.

Simon: Next!

Simon: Why don't reporters work too quickly? To prevent breaking news.

Simon: You mean 'breaking THE news'?

Simon: No... Yes? Dunno.

Simon: But the news has no problem with breaking news... In many cases, breaking news stories are the most popular.

Simon: Screw you.

Simon: Oh it's all coming out NOW, isn't it?

Simon: I'm so sorry. What letter of the alphabet is most feared? The P shooter.

Simon: Are peashooters feared?

Simon: No, but P shooters are.

Simon: Ok.

Simon: Where do cartoons of drunk people's legs come from? Dizzy knee world.

Simon: Ok, that's enough I think.

Simon: But there are so many more!

Simon: That's what's bugging me.

Simon: Oh. Bye, then...

Simon: Byeeee.