

James: Hello, listeners. Buy Fred's acid, the favourite acid of petrol companies. Because acid is used to make petrol or as the American's say 'gasoline'! That means Fred's acid is used by you as well! Buy Fred's acid.

Dan: Great.

James: No, I haven't finished. And well done to the USA for being creative with the word 'gasoline' and not ripping the UK off again. I mean you have New York and New Hampshire which are clearly based on the English York and Hampshire, but if that wasn't bad enough, the US has cities like Manchester? You didn't even bother saying 'new' there? My word.

Ben: James...

James: No, I haven't finished, there's Birmingham...

Dan (interrupting): Well done for doing what you're supposed to do and respecting our sponsor. I know it wasn't easy for you. If I'm being respectful to you, that means you'll be respectful to me. And Ben.

James: I'm taking a holiday after this podcast.

Dan: Doing your job was too stressful for you?

James: You have no idea. I was just about to have a panic attack, I think I even felt a heart attack coming on, but I finished the sentence and began to calm down.

Ben: I think we should point out how James is wearing an 'I love America' shirt.

James: Yes, I've been to the place. Great times, great people.

Dan: I think you better make another apology, James.

James: What for? The hate speech just now?

Dan: No. Well yes, but mainly for tricking a whole audience who paid good money to see an inspirational show that was supposed to be filled with inspiring people, into watching total trash.

Ben: How did you organise the whole event, James?

James: Oh months and months of planning...

Ben: Any details?

James: First you trick the theatre crew's cooks, the runners, then you work your way up from there.

Ben: How many people did you trick exactly??

James: Well over a thousand...

Ben: What did you say to them?

James: Just that I had a one of a kind amazing super show. I was very convincing because that's what I believed.

Dan: I still don't understand...

James: If you say something enough to enough people, eventually they'll listen. First up I managed to get access to the place selling burgers outside the TV studio, before you know it I'm in the highest level office.

Dan: Why?

James: I just had a passion, that's all.

Dominant Egg: If he told me about it, I would have put a stop to the show immediately.

James: Well I didn't tell you, because you're not inspiring. You're just a brutish egg who can't handle fame.

DE: Say that again.

James: I was just saying, if your mental health was better, you wouldn't have the need to act like a complete asshole... And...

Ben: Oh my God! The Dominant Egg has flown into James's mouth!

Dan: He's choking!

Ben: Charlie, you don't know what you're doing!

Dan: You're throwing your whole life away!

James: Mmmmmmm....

Ben: This is madness!

Dan: I'm going to have to do the Heimlich manoeuvre...

James: Bluuuuuuurgh.... Ok, I'm fine. I'm fine.

(James gasps for air)

DE: Say it again.

James: ... And act like a twat...

Ben: You know what to do, Dan.

James: Blueeeeeergh...

DE: I think I've made my point.

James (out of breath): Did you hear that, listeners? Did you hear me blueeering? It's all been recorded, you don't have a leg to stand on egg, you're going to jail!

DE: I don't have to put up with this anymore, I'm out of here.

(A door opens and shuts)

James: Moving on, if any listeners want to troll their friends, I'm performing the same show in a different city, tomorrow...

Dan: I don't believe you...

James: Yes, whilst I annoyed a lot of people I did actually made those involved with the show a lot of money...

Ben: That can't be legal.

James: Oh very much so. So tell your friends they'll be seeing the show of their lives. A show that will inspire beyond belief. Then the audience leave really angry, made even worse by the fact I'm profiting off that.

Dan: James, stop. Please. I understand no one is ever going to hire you so this podcast is the only thing you can do...

James: No, I can't really even do this show as I'm supposed to be in jail right now...

Dan: ... but you have to understand people don't like wasting their time and money...

James: That's the troll...

Dan: How would you like it if I wasted your time?

James: Actually I do consider time with you time wasted...

Dan: Ok, and how do you like that?

James: Oh, I hate it.

Dan: Right, now imagine that I made a world tour where I wasted your time.

James: You wouldn't dare...

Dan: I'm sick of arguing with you, just stop!

Ben: Why don't you tour with your band instead, James? What's the group called? The Waste Not Want Nots And The Whatnots?

James: That's the one.

Ben: And what style of music do you play?

James: Skiffle!

Ben: Great, tour with your skiffle band, then.

James: We're not very good...

Ben: Why doesn't that surprise me?

James: Well my acting abilities are good, so why shouldn't I be a good skiffle musician?

Ben: Oh wow, you can play two crazy people and someone hosting a show with crazy people in it, big woop.

James: Yes, huge woop. I have another character in mind who is a CEO, but also crazy. Oh yes, and I was thinking of calling my band 'The Waste Not Want Nots And The What NOTES'.

Ben: Well neither make sense, so it doesn't matter.

James: Sure it makes sense. The first band name means 'the people who don't waste things, and the other things', the second version means 'the people who don't waste things and the mysterious notes.'

Ben: And what has that got to do with skiffle music?

James: The second name relates to music. Kind of.

Ben: Kind of.

James: It's like with The Rolling Stones. Do literal rolling stones perform music, or do the members roll stones? No!

Ben: Ok, but the phrase 'rolling stones' sounds exciting. And rock music is exciting. The waste not want nots and the whatnots just sounds random.

James: Catchy, though.

Dan: Well we're all out of time. If anyone has made it to the end, well, all I can say is sorry. Again. Bye!

James: Bye.