

MAN: Hello, how are you? I'm calling for the over the phone job interview...

WOMAN: Oh, hello! I'm great, thanks. You?

MAN: I'm fine.

WOMAN: Miserable weather, right?

MAN: No, I like it.

WOMAN: Not me, haha.

MAN: Oh, that's terrible.

WOMAN: I understand you want to be a guitar teacher?

MAN: That's right. I'm very good. I have mega grade 8 skills.

WOMAN: That's... amazing.

MAN: Super amazing.

WOMAN: Do you have any other qualifications?

MAN: To be honest, no.

WOMAN: To be honest? So you were you lying beforehand? Haha.

MAN: Err... Yes. I want to come clean. You know when I said 'how are you?' I didn't really care. Unless you're dying of course.

WOMAN: No I'm not dying.

MAN: Doesn't matter then, does it?

WOMAN: Ok.

MAN: To be honest I really want the job though.

WOMAN: Alright...

MAN: To be honest, I think I'll be very good at it.

WOMAN: You can stop saying 'to be honest' all the time. I get the point.

MAN: Great! I hope your business is going really well, too!

WOMAN: Were you lying again?

MAN: To be honest, yes.

WOMAN: Would you maybe like to go back to telling the truth?

MAN: To be honest, no.

WOMAN: Is this a prank call?

MAN: To be honest, I was hoping it would go very well...

WOMAN: To be honest, it isn't.

MAN: It's going bad?

WOMAN: To be honest, it's going REALLY bad. I'm only continuing with it because I want to know what you'll say next.

MAN: What's the salary for the job?

WOMAN: I really don't think that's a concern for you.

MAN: Actually I hate maths and numbers and that kind of stuff.

WOMAN: No, I meant you're not getting the job.

MAN: Why?

WOMAN: You need good communication skills to be a teacher.

MAN: I see. I hope that you'll have a great rest of the day and that you'll find someone more suitable... To... be... honest...

WOMAN: It was clearly hard for you to say that.

MAN: What can I say? I'm honest and I hate lying. Most of the time.

WOMAN: Awesome. You've got the job then.

MAN: Really??

WOMAN: No. I'm clearly a better liar than you. Either that or you're really gullible.

MAN: Technically it could be both.

WOMAN : I don't think that matters right now, do you?

MAN: Not when it comes to the JOB, no...

WOMAN: ... Just when it comes to this argument?

MAN: Right, exactly!

WOMAN: Well. You've won this argument. I hope you're happy now. Congratulations.

MAN: Thanks. In all seriousness though, I am pretty good at guitar.

WOMAN: ... and I suppose you could 'outsmart' cheeky students!

MAN: That's the main reason I was attracted to the job.

WOMAN: But what happens when they lose their temper and hit you?

MAN: That's fine, I know karate. Or rather I know OF karate.

WOMAN: Ok. To be blunt, it seems you're really not the kind of person my company is looking for. That's getting more and more clear. It would be a very bad move hiring you.

MAN: Fine, I'll start my own company, then.

WOMAN: And what company would that be? The 'Hit the Students' corporation?

MAN: No! Hit the NAUGHTY students! (Or the annoying ones).

WOMAN: ...