

How many famous people have you seen in your life? I THINK I've seen ten. Not only is that a good few celebs, it's one of the roundest numbers around as well. Not as round as 100, but if I did see that many stars, that would almost be 3 a year. Would that be a coincidence or would that make me a stalker? One of the busiest stalkers of all time. 1,000 stars is far too round. Maybe if you worked in a film studio you could pull it off, but I'm trying to put myself in the felon's shoes and I just can't.

Anyway my 10th favourite star I've seen is...

A Wright Stuff presenter!

About 13 or 14 years ago now, I overheard this person talking to a random commuter. He mentioned the WS program and he talked about being recognised before, but did he say something about him just LOOKING like the presenter? Not sure. Tbh, he could have said anything, he was too far away. Whatever the case, an interesting story! I can't find the name of the guy I saw, he's too obscure, but I think that adds to the mystery! Sadly however, it also adds to my laziness. To end on a positive, is it OCD if you don't spend ages and ages researching someone? Probably not. :O

9th: A Channel 4 presenter!

Unlike the prior, this person is most definitely still on TV! You've very likely seen this celebrity too, but have you seen her wandering around a London train station like me? It's unlikely! Super cool. She is clearly very sensible and not the kind of person to get lost, not like me. In my defence, I only got lost in the station when the train dropped me off somewhere I wasn't expecting, it wasn't my fault.

8th: Political editor

Not only have I seen this guy on TV, I PRESUME he works for the government as well. If not, I guess I don't know what political editors are. They stop Prime Ministers from saying something stupid, right? I think that's what I need. Whilst I didn't see him walking around a station, I did see him on the train and I'm 99% sure he was on the right one. 99.9%, even. However, we all make mistakes.

7th: Reece Shearsmith

Technically I saw him, but it was on stage many years ago now, with a show I think called 'Ghost Stories' or something. I certainly didn't see him by chance. Even so, a man behind many famous programs! There was someone else onstage too, but I don't know who he was, just some dude looking angry with me. Neither got lost on stage. Sounds obvious right? Well, maybe not. During a secondary school music performance, I didn't know where to plug in my guitar and technically speaking, I got lost! It ended up being the stuff of legends...

6th: Ewen Macintosh

I saw him in a London Comedy writers meeting! He didn't say much, much like in The Office. In hindsight, I should have sat next to him...

5th: Cassandra from Wayne's World

One of my favourite films of all time! The actress also played a baddie in True Lies. I didn't like her quite so much there, she was a bit evil. In WW, though? An excellent girlfriend to Wayne! I'm wondering why I saw her on a train to London when she's American. That's well beyond lost, that's ridiculous. I mean... how?? I get getting on the wrong train to New York or whatever but how did she get on the wrong airplane? When she wouldn't even need an airplane? This wasn't a simple slip up, she would have had to plan the journey for a long time beforehand. Odd.

4th: Micheal Angelo Batio

I saw him in a Birmingham guitar show when I was about 18! I actually I own a copy of his album 'No Boundaries' and when I was in the event, he kept talking to me and refused to leave me alone. I actually had him arrested for stalking me as he quite literally had no boundaries. I used to like his album, but not so much now that I understand its somewhat darker meaning. Joking of course, but I did see him!

3rd: Derren Brown

I saw him in London Bridge train station, but I was wary of getting too close to him in case he read my mind. That's actually a true story. I mean what is an illusion and what is a genuine skill? How would you know?? Thank God he got into a different carriage.

2nd: Kerry King

The guitarist of one of the most famous thrash bands of all time, Slayer! Or, as fans of the band say, Slayeeeeerrrr!!!! KK has an album called 'Reign in Blood'. If I was nervous around Mr. Batio, I was terrified around Kerry. Would you like to be around someone who reigns in blood? Joking again, but I did see him, also in Birmingham!

Who could be in first place, right?? Surely it doesn't get any better than the previous examples??

1st: The Techno Viking

This Youtube legend has some of the sickest moves in the world and if you read the site's comments, many say he selflessly protects the weak as well - all whilst dancing! Sadly I've never seen him do a sick move in real life, but that only makes him humble and an all around great techno viking!

Right, that's the list done! I guess.... bye!
