

Hello, again. This apology is by far the most grave. I am so so so so so so SO so sorry to Rammstein for suggesting they sing 'jaaaaaa' more than they do 'NEIN!', actually the reverse is true. 'Simon, I am uneducated when it comes to physics. Would you care to explain why you need to make such an apology? Best wishes, Ben'. Sure, I'll explain everything. If Rammstein did say jaaaa more than nein, that would make the land we're living in right now opposite world, AKA a parallel universe. If you find algebra confusing, times that my several gazillion. I'm just saying if you have to rethink literally everything in your life and update all your thoughts in the most extreme way possible... well, it would be annoying, wouldn't it? Up would become down, left would become right, etc. I read that INFPs (like me) have confusing personalities because they never fully trust the reality of what they experience, so if you think I'm unpredictable which you probably do, imagine that times a few gazillion, too. I know for a fact other people wouldn't be able to tolerate that, as most can't tolerate me already. They've told me to 'please leave' (repeatedly), and going in the other direction, much like in opposite world, some have said I'm not ready to leave (a mental home). So please don't ever mix up yaaaas with neins!

'Simon, I'm a psychology professor, is it possible you're an INFJ? Best wishes, Ben.' Hm, an interesting question. On one psych site it says INFJs are attracted to ESTJ people and such ESTJs make good police bosses and stuff like that. Nope, people like that almost always find me to be incredibly irritating. Sure, they could be angry at me for a wide variety of reasons, I'm a doubtful INFP after all, they could just be annoyed with me because when their backs are turned I mouth insults at them, but I do that to pretty much everyone, so I find it stupid ESTJs would be mad at me. Apparently I should be attracted to ESTPs who are James Bond like people. I've never met someone like that in my life. Sure I'd prefer being around such a person over a domineering person telling me what to do and calling me an idiot repeatedly, (though that could be because of prior insults on my part again, who knows??? :O) but I do find such theories to be weird. It's interesting that in reverse world I would be an ESTJ as that is indeed the type that is opposite to INFP. Can you imagine me being bossy? That would be insane. I wonder what I'd be like as a police boss, too. Probably not a good one, but it would make a damn good blog.

What should INFPs good at, according to the internet? Writing! Sounds about right to me. They make good counsellors, too? Errrrr.... Not too sure about that one. 'Simon, can you really call yourself a writer if all you talk about is mental illness and antagonising people? Best wishes, Ben'. Sure I can, if I write things, I'm a writer. 'Dear, Simon. If...' God not him again, I'm just going to block him. Anyway, let's Google what else INFPs should be good at... I should be creative? There you go Ben, that sounds fair enough. I'm 'determined to make the world a better place' and am 'always willing to reach out and help'? Yeah! Yeah, I get that! That just needs a tiny bit of clarification: Always willing to help MYSELF. There you go, no ambiguity there whatsoever. Now let's see what are my negative traits... I'm self critical? Yeah! My problems are caused by OTHER people, I'm really starting to like this site now. I'm also bad at socialising? Yes, maybe I need to stop judging myself as the site suggests, then I can open up more. By that logic I should judge others? I'm thinking about reverse world again. If Rammstein can deal with the alternate universe (I hope), maybe I can too. I do have a German name after all. Not only that, in a recent fair, I ate a sausage.

I guess now I should apologise for saying the same kind of stuff again. Or again again. Or triple again, if not more. It's just that nothing really has happened to me lately, that I haven't already written about. I'm terrified of writing another techno terror blog, I've recently received this text message: 'Make sure you have £10 credit ready for your £10 to automatically renew in 7 days.' It may sounds harmless to you, but I'm genuinely scared. Is that tech code for suggesting I have to change my phone number again? Please, for the love of God, don't let me go through THAT again. Is it extreme behaviour if I take my phone to Staines once more to clarify what the text message means? I'm assuming it means I need £10 to top up my phone, but what if I'm wrong?? Do you know what I'd love in opposite world? To be tech savvy. This will sound weird to people who haven't read this monologue, but because I do indeed want to be good with computers, in a way, I'd love Rammstein to go 'jaaaaaaaa'. It definitely needs an explanation, doesn't it? And.... bye!
