

I'm still traumatised from all the computer updating business, so I thought I'd review something upbeat and fun, that being 'Pure Christmas' by various artists. Just to cheer me up. Having said that, at the same time I'm still kinda buzzing from all the adrenaline caused by the upgrading, no joke. I'm also energised because it's the happiest time of the year obviously, so you can imagine how I'm feeling right now. You could be forgiven for expecting me to go crazy, steal a car and go joyriding very fast, I'm THAT close to snapping. No, only joking. And of course, the review is fitting because it's the festive period. Duh. Can you imagine someone joyriding to happy children's music? Me neither, which proves I won't do anything illegal. I Think about it sure, but only out of curiosity. In a way that makes me an intellectual. I'm still not completely in the clear though as often after updating my computer I have to do ANOTHER update a week or so later. However, as the 2nd download always seems to be a smaller it causes me less problems, so I think I should be fine. Annoyed but fine.

The album I'm reviewing is made up of 4 CDs, so I doubt I'm going to listen to everything. I may be shaken, but not so shaken I need to listen to 4 hours or so of music featuring major chord after major chord. It's enough to drive you crazy and make you want to listen to horrible atonal death metal, just for the variety. Then that music makes you nervous, so you put on Christmas music again. It's an endless cycle if you're not careful, a true living hell. Maybe you can sleep things off? No, no, you'll dream about Christmas music, too as it's catchy. I like the song that goes 'it's the most wonderful time of the year' though, it reminds me of Home Alone 2, the best Christmas film of all time and better than the original even if it's basically the same film. In comparison, what you rather have, an early car that's perfectly reasonable or the exact same car that's better and that comes out later? I've got you there, haven't I? So why does the first film get a higher rating? Stupid reviewers. I didn't like Elf so much. I thought it was a bit silly. I might watch it again though, maybe it will grow on me. I just don't like the way how the main character acts like a child. Kinda annoying. Home Alone 2 is very clever in that the main character IS a child. Simple and genius at the same time.

Hang on... me complaining a man is acting like a child. It's projection, isn't it? That was very deep of me, wasn't it? Sadly I have similar thoughts where I'm annoyed at others for no good reason, almost every day. As I'm so introspective, there is no need for me to get therapy, I can just judge myself on my own. I guess I should point out that therapists are actually very nice people and are not judgemental. There's a lot of this review that can get me into trouble. I'm well into the 2nd CD now and I have to say, I'm starting to get a bit annoyed. I hope it's not going to make me tired of the holidays, if it does and if it makes other people feel the same, boy are retail companies going to feel stupid for endlessly playing it in their shops. I'm almost into my 3rd CD now, but before that I think I need a break. Let's listen to just one Iron Maiden song. 'Fear of the Dark'? What's Christmassy about that? Hang on, December 25th is ALMOST the darkest day of the year. That's a pure coincidence though, Youtube just recommended the song to me. A pure coincidence Christmas. That's what the album should be called. It doesn't make sense at first and it isn't catchy, making it incongruent with the music. I tried though.

Ok, NOW I'm listening to the 3rd CD. You know what? I'm not looking forward to Christmas QUITE as much as before. But moods go up down anyway, right? So who knows what's going on? That's just the wacky world of Wiedemann Comedy. I'll tell you what I am looking forward to - getting a pizza after the gym today. (Now yesterday). Last time I ordered a pizza I got one free, I guess as Papa John's way of saying sorry not having part of my order in stock anymore. I appreciated the gesture, but come on, what am I going to do with two large pizzas? I was forced to give one to my dad which I didn't like at all. Anyway, there is one song that goes 'All I want for Christmas is my two front teeth'. It's definitely the weirdest song yet. I'm hoping the lyrics don't mean the poor boy singing wanted his teeth wrapped up in a present, that's sick and it certainly shouldn't be put on such a cheerful CD. There are death metal lyrics that aren't as disturbing. You know what, I don't think I'm going to listen to the 4th CD, it's too much. I can however listen to positive music by David Lee Roth, that being 'Damn Good' a song about damn good times! Again, getting your own teeth in a parcel isn't a good time at all. Now what score to give the album? It's hard because in small doses, the songwriting is consistently very good. But in 4 hour doses? Too far. If I were to rate the best songs, I'd give them at least 9.5/10. The album on the whole? 2/10. Bye!
