

Hello, this time I would like apologise to The Dominant Egg for leaving him out of the most recent 12 Random Words of Christmas rankings. It's just that I pointed out that it's not really possible for two eggs to raise another egg when they are so hard working. Charlie is of course an A-list actor and Wendy has done lots of modelling. I said maybe they should slow down their lives a little before parenting and Charlie took it the wrong way and he stopped talking to me. Everything is good now though after I joked that there was a 50% chance the young egg would be dominant, i.e. badass and a 50% chance it would be beautiful, so expect to hear from him and his lovely wife very soon. In fact, you'll be hearing from egg child Henry very soon as of course, eggs grow up very fast. I know, let's contact Charlie right now... Charlie, are you there?

Charlie: Yes, Simon? What is it?

Simon: We ARE cool, right? You're going to keep being a part of Wiedemann Comedy?

Charlie: Sure...

Simon: Oh that's great news. Good luck with the baby, by the way. I bought it a small egg cup.

Charlie: Oh that was very thoughtful, thanks...

Simon: I didn't really know what else to get you, to be honest...

Charlie: And why is that?

Simon: Don't sound offended, I'm not calling you simple, I just don't know what to buy an egg baby, that's all. I feel like I'm walking on egg shells with you.

Charlie: What's that mean?

Simon: It doesn't mean I want to skin you and then step on you like I know you're thinking, it means you're hypersensitive! And now you REALLY are!

Charlie: I'm hypersensitive because I get offended when you say you want to peel my egg skin off?

Simon: What no! You're crazy! Are you on drugs, you sound really on edge! Why don't you just go and hit someone, you clearly haven't changed!

Charlie: What the hell?

Simon: No, that's not what I meant!... Oh he's gone. Well, it seems like I have to apologise like never before. Charlie, I am SO sorry I accused you of being on drugs, I know for a fact you are 100% sober. A little bit difficult to talk to maybe, but deep down, a great egg and...

Charlie: Hello, Simon?

Simon: Yes?

Charlie: No, it's me who's sorry. It's just I have a new role as a crazy egg in an upcoming film and I guess I've been taking the part a little too seriously. I'm so into my film it's like I am literally a crazy egg. It's method acting.

Simon: Ah, of course. All forgiven.

Charlie: Thanks, man.

Simon: May I ask what the film is called?

Charlie: Sure. It has two potential names. The first is 'The Cold Egg' but that was considered a bit straightforward in the discussion. The second is 'Egg Served Cold', but that could suggest the film is about eating eggs and it's not.

Simon: A tough problem.

Charlie: What's your favourite title?

Simon: The second, it's more creative.

Charlie: Cool.

Simon: And of course, you're not so into the film you're going to neglect Henry?

Charlie: Right.

Simon: And you're not so into your film you're going to accuse him of anything wacky?

Charlie: Right. Also, do you mind if I make an apology?

Simon: No problem! :)

Charlie: Sorry for going 'wacky' on you.

Simon: Oh I wouldn't worry about that at all, you should see James!

Charlie: Why does he feature in your site so often?

Simon: Maybe because he's very hardworking, he puts a lot of effort into his radio shows, you know?

Charlie: Is that all that matters to you?

Simon: Look, we're all a team. There's me, there's James, there's you and your family, there's even an evil fish. All bring something different to Wiedemann Comedy and whilst there is a significantly higher rate of mental illness in the team when compared with the general population, that's what makes the show different!

Charlie: Ok, ok, fine. I'm getting you a present, by the way.

Simon: Oh really? What?

Charlie: A bed!

Simon: A whole bed?? You really shouldn't!

Charlie: It's the least I can do, with you effectively buying a bed and a chair in one present for Henry.

Simon: But the price difference is huge!

Charlie: Oh, it was nothing, really. Anyway, gotta go!

Simon: Wow. In that case, I think that not only should this monologue be an apology but a thank you, too! A MASSIVE thank you to Charlie Baldwin for buying me a huge or at very least a relatively huge bed! Of course that does mean his preparation for his role isn't as extreme as he once suggested, but I think that's for the best, anyway. I mean Henry seeing Charlie that way for so long? Poor egg! But of course there is no need to worry at all as Charlie and Wendy really are the perfect egg couple. Good luck to them, I say! I guess I should also promote his I'm sure EXCELLENT film 'Egg Served Cold'. Let's search the internet to find out who else is starring in it, I bet it has some really big names... Henrique Aubert?... That's Le Poisson Militaire! Why didn't the egg say?? This film is going to be huge! What's his role, I wonder?... He's the egg's serious psychiatrist who's job it is to rehabilitate him and prepare him for the outside world? Wow, it sounds pretty deep actually, it should be good... Sorry I'm getting a call...

Simon: Hello?

LPM: Hello, Simon. It's Le Poisson Militaire.

Simon: Oh. Hello...

LPM: Thanks for promoting the film...

Simon: No problem...

LPM: I however am not method acting, so I'm going to continue behaving the way I always do and I'm going to invade Peru.

Simon: Why Peru?

LPM: The potatoes!

Simon: Maybe Peru will want the potatoes for themselves?

LPM: Yes, but I want the potatoes, too.

Simon: Why??

LPM: Because I want everything!

Simon: Even England??

LPM: Yes!

Simon: England can expect an imminent invasion led by you?

LPM: One day.

Simon: Well, that was chilling. It kind of makes me uncomfortable promoting you...

LPM: Thanks again.

Simon: These are complex emotions for someone to have...

LPM: Sorry.

Simon: Now I feel even weirder...

LPM: Anyway, got some acting to prepare for, bye!

Simon: Ok readers, I'm sure the fish isn't REALLY going to invade England... If so, HE'S the one needing to do an apology, isn't he? And on that optimistic note goodbye and a super merry Christmas!!