

It's time for another list of Twitter lols and jokes/jokes and lols. As those who know me will know, I'm all about remembering what order to put them. It should always alternate between the two. I have to be honest, I once cheated by accident and saw my profile page's list of lols and jokes before clicking on the 'post tweet' button. I was about to make an error, but the fact I ultimately didn't was a good feeling. That was on 27th of Feb. On March 2nd I saw my list of lols and jokes again but that time I was right. Still though, an annoying feeling, I'm all about the thrill of not knowing right answers and the euphoria of finally seeing them. Please don't assume I have no life, even if my blogs will back that up, I just like living to the max even in the most unexpected places. That's all. Anyway, on March 4th, I very nearly saw my list of jokes/lols again but didn't. Edge of your seat stuff. Not only that, I got the order right! An order double whammy as my saying goes. This monologue will be different in that I will be calculating my success rate. I will also calculate my last post's success rate to see if I've improved! Now that's edge of your seat stuff, let's go! Oh yes, and if you found that paragraph to be hard to read, you have no idea the pain that went into writing it. I'm not fully sure it made sense. Now let's go!

Not a great start, but perhaps a bigger issue is how I'm going to make this entry truly different from my last. I thought this was a good idea at first, but I'm already starting to get just a little bit scared. Ok, I'm terrified. Let's count how many correct orderings I can get in a row...

Wow look at that one! 15 in a row?? Ah, the sweet smell of success. Smells like letters. The letters L and J! ;)

L J

Damn. Last monologue I gave random anecdotes to up the intrigue, and I think that's what I'll have to do here. But how to be more original?? I could point out how there will be a success rate at the end again, that's cool, but before then? Er, the thing is on second thoughts I want to save my decent anecdotes for an upcoming interview. I mean will people really care about these writings, so why bother? Clearly I'm doing little else than writing L J, J L. You're witnessing the downfall of Wiedemann Comedy. :(

1st February

Ah, February. If you think me remembering two letters gives me a high, imagine the thrill of being able to spell such a weirdly named month! Who in their right mind pronounces the first 'r'? Why is it there? Whatever the case, I've just nailed it with no help whatsoever. I also know how to spell 'poignant'. Who put the 'g' there and why? Next spelling goal? Cauliflower.

I know how to spell 'rhetorical' too. If anything that's more impressive than the last one.

Whoops. Oh I know what to say. You know how I'll be using percentage at the end? That's some advanced stuff, so how do I build up to it? With small steps. It may not be maths, but how about I spell my surname? Wiedemann. Got it first try! As you may know that's been causing me some difficulties of late.

Damn. Hydrogen is the first element in the periodic table, though. :) THAT'S knowledge.

J L

Oh no. BUT did you know you can figure out a tree's age by sawing the trunk and counting its rings? I did.

Ah, another error. But, some tortoises can live way over a hundred years! Let's use Google to find out the max life span... Jonathan the tortoise is 191? Ok I was 91 years off. Still though, not 92! High five!

Have you ever noticed how pigeons only seem to peck small bits of food? Surely they need more just to maintain their body weight. What's up with that?

J L

Another error, another observation: Did you know spider webs are stronger than steel? If that's true, heavy metal songs with lyrics such as 'stronger than steel' really aren't that impressive. Such lyrics might as well be replaced with the words 'stronger than paper'. How would you react if you heard that? I'd be confused.

Here we go again. The Eiffel Tower is somewhere in France. That's not apathetic writing, really that's the product of desperation.

Another three lots of repeats. On the plus side, guess how many ants there are in the world? 20 quadrillion! I'm assuming that's not an exact number, trying to count THAT would be an extreme waste of life. Even that guy who counted to a million on Youtube is at least a little funny in the head. Oh I do apologise. If I took the time to read just four more words, I would have read 'At least 20 quadrillion.' I guess the heading I first wrote about was being punchy. Fair enough.

Tortoises live for ages! Yes I've said that, but it's definitely worth repeating. I'm assuming the animals don't live that long in the wild though, as they're SO easy to kill.

Want to hear some super impressive maths? $4.25 \times 6.8 = 28.9$. I did however, use a calculator.

And a small fail to end things! P.S. badgers live to 14.

1st Twitter Memory Exercise

DAYS IT LASTED: 144

ERRORS: 37 :(

PERCENTAGE RIGHT: 118.232044199% Does that sound right to you? I mean I followed the instructions on Google on how to work out a percentage, but I think I've made a mistake or two. On another attempt I got 200% :S

2nd Exercise

DAYS: 118

PERCENTAGE RIGHT: Forget it.

Ok so there were lots of errors. Maybe too many. BUT note how I never got three Ls/ Js in a row like last time! Certainly not four that was very strange. And on that happy note, byeeeee!
