

It gets tiring you know? Reviewing albums by bringing up mental illness as happy as it makes me feel at the time, (sometimes I feel regretful), and writing blogs about mental illness, etc... So let's just review random words again, then I can write a short story which is at least kind of a break. By that I mean I'm not mentally ill there, just my characters. See the pattern? I do my site, then rest by reviewing albums for Metal Rules, do more articles, then a story and more articles! I'm basically saying I get annoyed by myself, now let's go!

15th: Draconian

Oh no, laws that are too harsh? Whilst I haven't got in trouble for my writings yet, if the law was more extreme, maybe I could go to jail. As in 'I'm Alan Sugar and YOU are screwed'. Sorry Alan.

14th: Tawdry

Who likes things that are poor quality? Not me, CD cases in bad condition seriously annoy me and CDs in bad condition are not acceptable. However, out all my many hundreds of albums, I only have ONE CD in poor condition as I picked it up from a charity shop. I will replace it one day.

13th: Protest

Protests can be good, but given the wrong circumstances I can see people protesting against me. 'Simon said I was the devil, I drink blood, I sacked every single person in the world, including babies', etc. You know what scares me? Millions of people on the streets with huge signs telling me to act normally. AAARGGH!!!! :S

12th: Pink

I've never worn pink in my life apart from that one time I had a pink and black Ozzy Osbourne t-shirt, but even then that was only because there were no other Ozzy shirts available at the time. I actually still own it, but it's very worn out as I bought it as a 14 year old. When I look at it I feel 14 again. It was a rubbish year, but I keep the clothing anyway out of mental curiosity!

11th: Remain

Change can be scary, right? I don't want CHILD POVERY to remain but internet access, access to pizzas, immediate access to super well kept CDs (CD cases are up and down) can all stay.

10th: Uppity

Would you trust someone in charge of the whole country who WASN'T uppity (arrogant)? I wouldn't. What's the alternative? Someone saying to a Prime Minister 'What are you going to do about crime?' and getting the response 'I might be wrong, but I THINK there should be more police. Either that or tougher sentences...' With enough research the best option should be very clear. It's a more extreme example but it's like someone not knowing whether to drive through red or green traffic lights.

With less research (ok a lot less) that should be clear, too. Would you trust him to lead the country?

9th: Honorable

What's better, an uppity leader or an honourable one? Probably the latter. I'm just saying if I asked the former for money I'd get told 'No you may not, no chance' and with the second person it would just be like 'sure, I'll give you some for yourself and some for you to give to a needy person as well'. Awesome! But of course I'm needy, otherwise I wouldn't be asking, meaning I get to keep all of the money. Oh if only I was as honourable as you. :O

8th: Stormy

I like stormy weather! Not floods, but thunder and lightning is fun! You know what? I probably prefer honourable people over floods, I guess I should have thought the ranking out more, but as I've decided it already, it's here to stay. :S

7th: Curtain

Again, I guess honourable people are better than curtains. Curtains are better than storms, though. Wow, I have the choice of sunlight over darkness, rather like Apollo, God of light! Interestingly Apollo is god of music, as well. Me too!

6th: Workable

It's great when things are workable, including at least some of this ranking! It gets a little weird at the end, though...

5th: Oblige

I'd love to boss someone around and force him to do something! Great! I'm not sure what I could ever be the boss of, though. I can pretend to be the boss of light and music I guess, as explained earlier. It's the kind of thing I should probably keep to myself, though.

4th: Approval

Like oblige, but less bossy and without the constant sense of tension. Saying 'I approve of you doing that' is better than saying 'do what I say', right? However, it's more my style to say 'I'll approve of you if you do what I say'. Trick them that way.

3rd: Fish

Fish are cool! They come in all shapes and sizes and all are fun to look at. Deep sea angler fish are an exception but they can be used to scare people away! As in 'don't come near my pond or you'll regret it!!' Can you put such fish in ponds? Judging by their name, probably no.

2nd: Salty

How salty is salty? As simple as it may be, it's actually one of my favourite ingredients. I wouldn't want to eat pure salt but where would you be without it? Bland food and the Romans can't get paid, it would be horrible!

1st: Disturbed

Who's more fun to be around? Someone who says 'please' and 'thank you' or someone who thinks he's been given flying abilities and laser vision by God?

Right, all done! It ended weirdly as promised but I think I made a valid point. When the next random word ranking will be, I don't know, but when it does come around how will I top its title? I guess I'll have to top it, and on that epic note... bye!