

Hellooo. I was going to do all of my 'what's the difference' jokes in one monologue, then I thought... 'Wow. This is going to take ages, and I'm going to go mad, too.' So let's break it up into three different parts. Yes, yes, yes, a lot of the following jokes aren't very good, but I think the later versions are better. Sadly, this monologue deals with the first load. Don't judge me. And I would have done 100, but I did 99 instead (a perfectly nice number) because I made a mistake. See the word 'difference' above? THAT'S the 100 difference and it confused me. It's all because of my writing analyser/word spotter/counter or whatever you call it. Long story. Let's go!

99. What's the difference between an elf and a shelf? Shelves are quieter.

I can't remember why that's supposed to be funny, but at least it's true. Well, it would be true if elves existed. Let's try and work out what I meant, right now... Ohhhhhh, I get it. Shhhhh. Shhhhhelf. Very good. Very rewarding once you get it, no? Still, it's coming last.

98. What's the difference between cold weather and grieving songs about ink? One's inclement and the other's ink lament.

Not proper English, so it doesn't work.

97. What's the difference between a giant and a tanning salon built for neckwear? One's a titan, the other's a tie tan.

Better than the last one, but if there WAS a building that tanned ties, it would surely tan more than one of them, or it wouldn't be very good, would it?

96. What's the difference between something amazing and a semi-aquatic mammal that's convincing? One's incredible, the other's a mink, credible.

Makes sense unlike the last one, but just not chuckle worthy.

95. What's the difference between a madman and Van Gogh? One's delirious, the other's de-ear-ious.

Could the word 'de-ear-ious' ever catch on? Personally, I can't see it.

94. What's the difference between a large number and the fear of two warriors? One's two hundred, the other's two Hun dread.

Two hundred IS a reasonably large number, but it's a random large number.

93. What's the difference between a truthful man and someone who stands on a letter that looks like the number 5? One's honest, the other's on S.

Yes, the number 5 does look like the letter S. But who would stand on it and why?? Not so much a wacky joke, rather completely unfeasible.

92. What's the difference between offensive material and a fast food worker in a building? One's insulting, the other's in, salting.

At least fast food workers DO salt things! Is the act of salting things funny? It is not.

91. What's the difference between a cannon and a bird scientist? One's a howitzer, the other asks how it soars.

Maybe a science student would ask how a bird soars. You'd hope a scientist would know.

90. What's the difference between a shock and a medal for a man? One's a surprise, the other's a Sir prize.

Are medals things to be laughed at or respected? I do apologise for devaluing your excellent achievement.

89. What's the difference between a cow and a long feline? One's cattle the other's a cat, tall.

Perhaps more of a fact than a joke.

88. What's the difference between the mafia and earplugs? One creates protection rackets, the other gives protection from rackets.

Is the mafia funny? What I do know is you shouldn't laugh AT them. Let's move on. And quickly.

87. What's the difference between an antiperspirant and Dio yelling at people? One's deodorant, the other's Dio-the-ranter.

I'm sure Dio never ranted at people. If, IF he ever did, I'm sure it was only for his most excellent and fantastic aggressive rap-metal project. (That he kept secret).

86. What's the difference between a wooden percussion instrument and a grain storage communication device? One's a xylophone, the other's a silo phone.

Very wordy. And who cares about a grain storage communication device, really? It's ok, I know.

85. What's the difference between a syringe and a baby? One's a needle and the other needs dolls.

Not really true. Babies like dolls maybe, but then the joke punchline would be 'One's a needle, the other likes dolls.' That's even worse than the quiet elf gag.

84. What's the difference between a lost football match and a building with sails on it? One's one-nil, the other's one mill.

An excellent joke for those from the third century. Well, it would be excellent after the explanation of what football is.

83. What's the difference between a fish-woman and a drink made of mumbles? One's a mermaid, the other's murmur ade.

A drink of mumbles?

82. What's the difference between a ghost house and a teddybear rhino? One's haunted, the other's a horn-ted.

This joke would be better if bear-rhinos were a real thing. It's an interesting image, though.

81. What's the difference between complete quiet and a dissatisfied weapon? One's silence, the other's a sigh lance.

Oh if only weapons could be dissatisfied. Maybe that's a joke for future A.I. weapons!

80. What's the difference between the maximum amount, and loads of delivered purses? One's 100 percent, the other's one hundred purses sent.

Not gibberish, but perhaps more factual than funny. Again.

79. What's the difference between a medical practitioner and someone who used to rip up documents? One's a doctor, the other was a doc-tore.

... Or rather doc-tearer. :S

78. What's the difference between guidance and an advert gripper? One's advice, the other's an ad vice.

You can't grip adverts. No, no, you can grip printed adverts, I guess.

77. What's the difference between a Jewish religious leader and an itchy eye? One's a rabbi, the other's a rubbed eye.

Itchy eyes don't necessarily get rubbed; if you're in a soapy bath, you'll only make things worse. But lengthening the joke would be a mistake, I think.

76. What's the difference between a practice session and the repairing of a coffin transporter? One's a rehearsal, the other's re-hearse-al.

A bit dark.

75. What's the difference between a crocodile and a man who builds gates in narrow passageways? One's an alligator, the other's an alley gate-r.

These jokes do get better, I promise. That was plain random.

74. What's the difference between an amazing work of art and a boss at rest? One's a masterpiece, the other's a master's peace.

Maybe bosses would find this funny? I don't.

73. What's the difference between sympathy and a man who ripped off a nuclear research facility? One's concern, the other conned CERN.

I really can't see how this one could happen even in the most extreme of circumstances. Less of a joke, more the premise of an action packed blockbuster.

72. What's the difference between a car's signal and an alligator that listens to independently released music? One an indicator, the other's an indie-gator.

You know what? I like the thought of alligators listening to indie music! I'm not rolling around on the floor laughing, but I am intrigued.

71. What's the difference between a runner up and a man in charge of toilets? One's a loser, the other's a loo Sir.

Some people need to be in charge of toilets, especially in the anarchy of inner cities.

70. What's the difference between self-government and the economy of orcs? One autonomy, the other's orconamy.

I'm not rolling around the floor personally, but I'm sure orcs will be.

69. What's the difference between a suspicious person and the most frustrated man on Earth? One's paranoid, the other's power annoyed.

Power annoyed? Sounds like the kind of thing Yngwie Malmsteen would say. I am of course referring to his epic 'You've unleashed the fury!'

68. What's the difference between a mobster and an excellent stir? One's a gangster, the other's a nang stir.

Slowly getting better, no? I'm not the kind of person to say 'nang', but I'm sure the young'ns will love it.

67. What's the difference Black Sabbath's singer and someone born in Australia? One's Ozzy Osbourne, the other's simply Oz born.

I'm sure many Australians will want to ignore being compared to Ozzy. Misguided Australians.

66. What's the difference between an undercover investigator at a rally and a winding curl? One's a spy rally, the other's spirally.

What makes this joke better than the prior ones, is the word 'spirally' sounds funny. I think that's basically it.

65. What's the difference between a long-eared, plant eating mammal and a compulsive stroker? One's a rabbit, the other's a rub it.

This one could be perceived as a bit pervy, but that's really not what I was going for.

64. What's the difference between a whirlwind and the best ever pizza base that's been pulled apart? One's a tornado, the other's torn A dough.

Mmm. I've had lots of 'A dough'. I had some on Saturday and leftovers on Sunday, in fact. Never gets old!!

63. What's the difference between a bushy hairstyle and a poor lob? One's an afro, the other's a naff throw.

I've always had a naff throw, but never had an afro. Hm. That probably doesn't signify anything, so I'll move on.

62. What's the difference between a mobile communication device and a froth salesman? One's cell phone, the other's a sell-foam.

You CAN sell foam in the form of shaving foam at least, but have you ever met a shaving foam salesman? Probably not. Even so, not too bad!

61. What's the difference between a pig with a tusk and the man with the world's bumpiest skin? One's a warthog, the other's a wart hog.

Ok, not all bumps are warts, but warts are bumpy!

60. What's the difference between a sea cow and a relaxed man? One's a manatee and the other's a man at ease.

Another joke for people relaxing, but this time for a less specific group of people! A real winner.

59. What's the difference between fish and a moving letter? One's sea life, the other's C life.

Ok, if you see a letter move it probably doesn't mean it's alive, but in the world of wacky jokes anything can happen.

58. What's the difference between a sandy landscape and vanilla ice cream? One's a desert plain, the other's a dessert, plain.

I don't find vanilla to be plain, but some do. So there you go.

57. What's the difference between uncertainty and oil from a short holiday? One's turmoil, the other's half term oil.

I've never heard of half term oil, but it surely exists, or the world will come to a halt at regular intervals. It's a perfectly reasonable gag!

56. What's the difference between a schizophrenic and someone who has 10 physical diseases? One is mentally ill, the other is MENTALLY ill.

I have been mentally ill, but not MENTALLY ill. At least not in my definition of the phrase.

55. What's the difference between a car servicing and a murderer's way of killing people with tea? One's an M.O.T., the other's an M.O. tea.

Yes you can kill people with tea, actually. A very, very, very strong tea, but it is possible.

54. What's the difference between a large, handheld gun, and a magazine on morphine? One's a magnum, the other's a mag, numb.

It really is sad that magazines can feel things. Throw them in the bin with care and respect.

53. What's the difference between a cabinet and a young fox with nothing to do? One's a cupboard, the other's a cub, bored.

Bored cubs aren't quite as bad as old magazines in agony and despair and feeling a huge sense of rejection, but still, be nice to them. :)

52. What's the difference between an infectious agent, and our angry boss? One's a virus, the other's a fire-us.

This joke works just as well without the word 'angry'. At least for me, anyway.

51. What's the difference between Ken Livingston and a dog's house? One's Ken L and the other's a kennel.

Sorry, Ken Livingston for comparing you to a dog's house.

50. What's the difference between a festival and Arnold after a meal? One's a carnival, the other's an Arnie full.

In contrast to many of my other jokes, this one can very easily happen. In fact I hope it does. Stay nourished, Arnie!

49. What's the difference between a good deal and a smile in a pub? One's a bargain, the other's a bar grin.

Me being family friendly more than ever.

48. What's the difference between betrayal and a baby tree? One's treason, the other's a tree son.

It's very sad that young (English/American) trees are associated with such a horrible word, largely because of me, but stay strong and you should be fine.

47. What's the difference between a spaceship and an old heavy metal band? One has retrorockets, the other is a retro rock it.

Spaceships AND heavy metal? The perfect joke.

46. What's the difference between money and a monkey?
Hioghojgiofjdiojtononkmkfds. I know what you're thinking: 'Kay...'

Wow, one of my very early jokes there, coming a very respectable 46th. So much better than last. But at least I understood that one in the end.

45. What's the difference between working out and the measuring of rarely used letters? One's exercising, the other's X sizing.

Sometimes you need to size Xs...

44. What's the difference between someone who is emotionally detached, and a girlfriend who has been insulted whilst proposed to? One's disengaged, the other's diss-engaged.

Take me advice: Never diss-engage someone. It will spoil everything.

43. What's the difference between a gym member and a payment in the underworld? One's healthy, the other's a Hell fee.

Can you buy things in Hell? If so, makes you wonder what. Maybe spicy noodles?? I have no idea.

42. What's the difference between a horned plant eater and a carefree dinosaur? One's a rhinoceros, the other's a why-not-asaurus.

I'd think at least some dinosaurs were carefree if they were too big to attack and they ate leaves all day. Bored, but carefree.

41. What's the difference between money demanded for something and a runner who gives up? One's a ransom and the other ran some.

Actually all runners run some, not just those who give up. Bad news for me, as you're supposed to write snappy jokes. :(

40. What's the difference between Steve and transport for horses? One's Stephen, the other's a steed van.

Yep, I've ruined the name 'Stephen' for everyone. Now Stephens will be compared to steed vans. Sorry about that.

39. What's the difference between a clan and a ball that never gives up? One's tribal, the other's a try ball.

Maybe balls with A.I. have the capacity to give up. Yep, I'm happy with that.

38. What's the difference between a supersonic passenger aircraft and a rubbish collection of notes? One's a Concorde, the other's a con chord.

Major/minor chords are con chords, in my opinion. You shouldn't be major and minor at the same time, it sounds terrible.

37. What's the difference between a shock absorber and a retirement fund that comes from drug dealing? One's a suspension, the other's a sus pension.

Do drug dealers get pensions from their illegal activities? Probably not.

36. What's the difference between a trooper and a container of ghosts? One's a soldier, the other's a soul jar.

Making voodoo lighthearted!

35. What's the difference between a mystery and a famous holy lady? One's the unknown, the other's a nun, known.

An example of a nun known would be Mother Teresa. Can happen!

34. What's the difference between a morning alcoholic drink, and a puppy? One's the hair of the dog, the other's the heir of the dog.

Hair of the dog is a very strange saying. Hair of the dog = drink to cure hangover? Maybe it means puppies make everything better.

33. What's the difference between a commander and a hat with a thing on it? One's a captain, the other's a cap ting.

I've never said 'ting' in my life, but some do.

32. What's the difference between a dissolving liquid and an ant mathematician? One's a solvent, the other's a solve ant.

Some ants are very clever.

31. What's the difference between the UK's shadow secretary and Edward's thousandth group? One's Ed Miliband, the other's Ed's mili-band.

First there's been a new prime minister every week, now Ed Miliband can't stay in the same band for more than a few minutes. -_-

30. What's the difference between sanity and a crazy supernatural being with pointy ears? One's mental health, the other's a mental elf.

Elves are usually very friendly, but there are some bad apples. Think a dark version of Lord of the Rings with stories of carjackings! :S

29. What's the difference between a cartoon and a gran's empire? One's animation, the other's nanny nation.

I could see my nan invading another country and starting her own empire...

28. What's the difference between Christmas and a wand in a fridge? One's magical the other's magic, cool.

... But do you know what's REALLY magical? Deftones.

27. What's the difference between a child and someone stuck in an American coin? One's innocent the other's in a cent.

I can see a coin getting stuck in a child, but not the other way round. I like the idea, though.

26. What's the difference between a small, old star and a small person with lots of words tattooed on his head? One's a red dwarf, the other's a read dwarf.

Sure you don't HAVE to read what's written on a dwarf's head, so the joke may not work, but I certainly would.

25. What's the difference between a recovered alcoholic and a stereotypical bear? One's sober, the other's SO bear.

Personally I haven't seen many bears at all, so I don't know what qualifies as SO bear. Even so, I dived into the unknown and wrote another perfectly reasonable gag.

24. What's the difference between God and a spirit that's been machine gunned? One's the Holy Ghost, the other's the holey ghost.

Can ghosts get holes in them? If you have shot a 'ghost' and you saw holes... well... I hate to say this, but you've just shot a dressed up man.

23. What's the difference between a spikey bit of plastic used to clean teeth, and someone who thieves false dentures? One's a toothpick, the other's a tooth prick.

I'm yet to meet someone who could steal my false dentures as I don't have any, but when I do... what an asshole!

22. What's the difference between a long sock and Argos? One's a stocking, the other's a stock king.

Really I should have said 'Amazon'. They really do have everything. :O

21. What's the difference between a tissue, and an old flame in a bath? One's Kleenex, the other's a clean ex.

Obviously I didn't mean a literal flame as water doesn't burn. You didn't think that I thought water was flammable did you??

20. What's the difference between a small ear protector and a frightened dwarf dog? One's an earplug, the other's a fear pug.

A joke tinged with sadness. :(

19. TEACHER: 'Student, what's the difference between a meal made of flat dough and toppings, and Peter?' STUDENT: 'One's pizza, the other's Pete, Sir.'

Anything that mentions pizza is a sure winner. A bit of a cheat, really.

18. What's the difference between a silly person and a payment made of slime? One's goofy, the other's a goo fee.

Who knows what the money of the future will be like??

17. What's the difference between a shop and a graffitiing fish? One's a marketplace, the other's a mark-it plaice.

Who knows what the fish of the future will be like??

16. What's the difference between a Californian city, and Samuel's main hose? One's San Jose, the other's Sam Hose A.

I don't call MY main hose 'Simon Hose A' as I only have one hose and it's my dad's. But when I buy two hoses, I will call them Simon Hose A and Simon Hose B!

15. What's the difference between a regular guy and a man made of butter? One's a geezer, the other's a ghee sir.

Sadly you don't see many men made of butter as they are kidnapped and melted down.

14. What's the difference between a characteristic and a long walk? One's a feature, the other's a feet chore.

Actually, I like walking. But not in deserts, I presume. So it at least partly works.

13. What's the difference between a student and a laxative? One's a pupil, the other's a poo pill.

Oh here we go. I had to be crude at least once, didn't I?

12. What's the difference between a savoury food spread and your mother's strength? One's Marmite, the other's ma might.

What's better, marmite or ma might? Well, I've had marmite and never used your ma's might, so I couldn't tell you. :( Hopefully I wouldn't need to.

11. What's the difference between a military port and a bass guitar played with a nose? One's a naval base and the other's a nasal bass.

If you can play bass with feet, you can play with your nose. Well you can use it as a plectrum, anyway.

10. What's the difference between a locomotive and a jaw exercise? One a choo choo train, the other's a chew chew train.

I think chew chew trains are called 'jaw exercise balls'. That name sucks, doesn't it. Mine's much better.

9. What's the difference between a subatomic particle and a new robot? One's a neutron, the other's a new tron.

Absolutely hilarious for physicists AND robotic engineers.

8. What's the difference between theft and meat sandwich making? One's burglary, the other's burglary.

Hilarious for robbers and cooks!

7. What's the difference between a hippopotamus and a cool letter? One's a hippo, the other's a hip O.

Do people still say 'hip' when they mean 'cool'? Probably not. But on the plus side, there is little ambiguity when it comes to hip operations. Well, maybe the surgeons COULD think a patient wants a cool operation?

6. What's the difference between the unknown mind, and a living sandwich? One's the subconscious, the other's a sub, conscious.

Personally, I wouldn't eat a sandwich if it was living.

5. What's the difference between a Youtube fan, and someone who writes on sandwiches? One's a subscriber, the other's a sub-scriber.

I would draw on one, though.

4. What's the difference between money left in someone's will and a medical waste mishap? One's a legacy, the other's a leg in sea.

I have no interest in working in any form of health care for obvious reasons.

3. What's the difference between political promotion and a very hard look? One's propaganda, the other's a proper gander.

Interestingly people who use propaganda need to have a proper gander at themselves.

2. What's the difference between a single man and Eleanor when she's put in a group? One's a bachelor, the other's a batch Ella.

Eleanour is a nice name, but it does have one minor flaw that I just pointed out.

1. What's the difference between murder and a country of cheeky people? One's assassination, the other's sassy nation.

There we have it, a one in 99 gag. I guess I just like sassy people.

Ok, I have exactly 221 more of these jokes to get through! When or if I will, I don't know. Let's be honest, the copying, pasting and ranking was incredibly boring. Not only that, my comments on the jokes took longer, and often I was laughing at myself!! Very painful. I guess... Bye!