

DAN: Hahahahaha!

BEN: Hahahahahaha!

JAMES: Ha?

DAN: Yes. We're laughing. At you.

JAMES: The speed typing thing?

DAN: Yes. Oh and welcome to the show, viewers. It will be a good one.

JAMES: I CAN type fast, actually. It was just a misunderstanding when I embarrassed myself on prime time TV.

DAN: I knew you would say that. Which is why I brought a typewriter with me. It's in this backpack...

(Unzipping sounds are heard).

JAMES: Ohhh yeah.

DAN: I'll make things easy for you. I want you to type your surname as fast as possible. Oh yeah. You can't spell it.

JAMES: Well it's German, isn't it?

BEN: You've had your whole life to learn it...

JAMES: Well I'm changing my name, aren't I.

BEN: To what? You keep changing your mind.

JAMES: Jo E.

BEN: What's the E short for?

JAMES: Nothing. It's a real, full surname.

DAN: So that's what you're going to be called for the rest of your life onwards? Just because you can't face the fact you can't spell names as complex as Ziegler?

JAMES: I've told you, it's German!!!

BEN: He'd probably misspell 'E', as well.

DAN: Anyway, type James Ian Zack Ziegler as fast as possible.

JAMES: No.

DAN: Ok. You win. Type Jo E as fast as possible.

JAMES: No.

BEN: Ok, you win. Type E as fast as possible.

JAMES: Now we're talking!

BEN: With Jo in front of it.

JAMES: Argh!

BEN: What's your IQ, James?

JAMES: I don't know.

BEN: Ok.

JAMES: It must be pretty high if I got away with crashing your car, Da...

DAN: No, that's wrong. You want to know why not in jail right now?

JAMES: Why?

DAN: The police explained to me that you're intellectually subnormal and you don't really know what you're doing.

JAMES: Are you SURE?

BEN: It was explained to me, too.

JAMES: Why wasn't it explained to me, then?

BEN: Did you go to a special school, James?

JAMES: Yes...

DAN: ...

JAMES: What's your silence supposed to mean??

DAN: Special schools are for slow children.

JAMES: Rubbish. I can name a million things that are improved when they're special. Special Belgian coffee? Special shoes with lights in them? Special mobile phones that go 'wahay!!!!' when you get a text message? Special email services that go 'woohoo!!!!' when yo...

DAN: I've never heard of those message notifications...

JAMES: I didn't say them, I paid a homeless person knowledgeable about I.T. to do it for me. But now he thinks I'm his full time boss, and he won't leave me alone!

BEN: How did you know he was knowledgeable about I.T.?

JAMES: We just get talking. He seemed like a really chilled out and easy going guy, but of course I now realise it was because he was high on drugs.

BEN: You never felt uncomfortable at any point?

JAMES: Nope. Anyway, isn't it funny how Jo E sounds like Joey? People would be like 'What's your name?' I'd say 'Jo E' and the other person would be like 'Joey who?' And I'd say 'That's my whole name!' We'd be rolling around the floor laughing!

DAN: Look, enough of this nonsense, just type your name. Please. For me.

JAMES: Is that James Ziegler, Special Air Service, or Jo E?

DAN: JAMES ZIEGLER! We all know you can't be bothered to change your name, so get used to it!

JAMES: But it sounds like ji...

DAN: We don't care!

JAMES: Fine.

BEN: And please don't just write your initials over and over again. Imagine if someone found a piece of paper on it with THAT stuff.

JAMES: Which is why I wanted to change my name...

DAN: Here's the typewriter. I'm putting it on your lap for you.

JAMES: Thank you.

DAN: Now... Type.

JAMES: Ok...

(Typing sounds are heard)

DAN: No, don't keep typing 'a'...

JAMES: But I'm really good at it though...

DAN: No one cares!

JAMES: I'm having flashbacks of the show I was on yesterday!

DAN: TYPE YOUR NAME!!!

JAMES: WHY??!?!?

DAN: BECAUSE IT'S REALLY FUNNY!

JAMES: NOT FOR ME!

DAN: WE KNOW!

JAMES: I know. Let me spell your name, Dan. I can spell your name.

DAN: Because of all the hate mail you send me?

JAMES: Yes. It's not just a hobby, even if you think it is. It's an entire way of life.

DAN: That's it, type your name now.

JAMES: No.

DAN: DO IT!

JAMES: Fine. Where's the J? Oh there it is. I'm fairly sure A follows. M makes perfect sense, but does an E come after that? Or is it a P?

BEN: Jamp?

JAMES: It's an I, isn't it?

BEN: Jami?

JAMES: Yes! Like Jamie!

BEN: But not exactly?

JAMES: No, but near enough! Am I right? Wool!

BEN: What's the last letter of your name?

JAMES: R.

BEN: That's Jamir.

JAMES: Yes...

BEN: Is that an Arabic name?

JAMES: Yep.

DAN: You had German-Arabian parents?

JAMES: Yes.

BEN: I thought your parent's names were Smith and Peterson...

JAMES: It's all very complicated...

DAN: You're saying you've really been called Jamir all along?

JAMES: Yep...

DAN: Why did you think you were called James?

JAMES: You know what? I don't know.

DAN: You're a man full of surprises, aren't you?

JAMES: Thanks. I think so, too.

DAN: Now type Jamir as fast as you can!

JAMES: J... A... M... A...

DAN: For the love of God, that's Jama!

JAMES: You type your name, genius!

DAN: Fine. Give me that typewriter.

JAMES: Here you go...

DAN: D, A, N. Done.

JAMES: ... That... was incredible!

BEN: Yes well done Dan, for spelling your name.

JAMES: Mind blown. Do yours, Ben!

BEN: Really?

JAMES: This is great content!

BEN: I disagree.

JAMES: Type your full name!

BEN: Do you even know what Ben is short for?

JAMES: Benedicto-biddly-bo-bo-biddly-b...

BEN: Nope, I'm going to have to interrupt you there.

JAMES: I'd be impressed if you could type that, though.

BEN: Again, you have to think of the people who would find that writing lying around...

DAN: Oh good, we're out of time. I guess James can't weird people out anymore. I keep complaining about him, but to be fair, it is a very special feeling when we all get away from him. It's a profound sense of peace and wellbeing you can't really find anywhere else...

JAMES: Bye.