

Error!

Simon: Hello, Simon. I noticed your site wiedemanncomedy.com isn't loading on your computer because it says the connection isn't private or whatever?

Simon: Mm-hm. I've checked my other computer and it runs on that...

Simon: Why?

Simon: No idea. I thought I'd ask Wix about the problem and I'm still waiting for a reply...

Simon: You emailed them, I understand. You must have been desperate as that's not easy to do.

Simon: Yes, finding Wix's email address is incredibly difficult. Lots of trial and error took place as it seems to have been changed recently. They DO have one, so they can't say they don't care about complaining/frustrated customers, technically speaking, but just be prepared to go on somewhat of a quest.

Simon: Either that or just read the troubleshooting section of their site?

Simon: No, I didn't want to do that. Anyway, then I had the idea of responding to a message the company sent me last year, which arranged a phone call to talk about any thoughts I had on them.

Simon: They must feel really strongly about people messaging them and wasting their time.

Simon: Well if they advertise their site as intuitive and say any old technophobe can use it, they really should expect people to approach them with all sorts of problems when they discover it's not. I don't know if they come across people like me, though.

Simon: I hate problems.

Simon: Exactly.

Simon: I noticed you can't book go-karting now because of the same error?

Simon: Yes. What my Mac has against comedy and mini cars is anyone's guess. It's the most random combination imaginable. It wouldn't be so weird if other sites were effected, but no. Just comedy and go karts.

Simon: Is... there anything else you want to say?

Simon: Like what?

Simon: Er...

Simon: Go on...

Simon: Um...

Simon: Are trying to buy time to think what the connection is?

Simon: I think I have something...

Simon: Which is...

Simon: Comedians are often quick-witted, whereas drivers are... quick...

Simon: Witted?

Simon: Well, no. Quick...

Simon: Yes?...

Simon: Just quick.

Simon: Ok. But how would the internet make the connection by itself and why would it bother making the warning?

Simon: I know I've talked about this subject before, but it's like Judgement Day. Computers are taking over, just on a small scale. I think it's valid to talk about such a serious matter repeatedly.

Simon: They're taking over on a VERY small scale.

Simon: They've definitely annoyed you at least.

Simon: Not as much as a nuclear apocalypse, though...

Simon: Apocalypses are really annoying aren't they. It's hard to find the words to describe how annoying they are. Even words like 'vexatious' or 'exasperating' don't really do it.

Simon: Inordinately vexatious is better, but still not enough. Which is why computers must be prevented from destroying the world.

Simon: Wait, that was my argument.

Simon: Doesn't matter, does it?

Simon: Oh yeah.

Simon: Anyway, I'm still waiting for a reply. I really shouldn't have messaged them twice, though. Unless that makes them want to hurry for whatever reason?

Simon: Ok. I hate to change the subject, but I'm just getting a bit confused about who is who. You're the one getting questioned? Right?

Simon: Really, we both are.

Simon: Ok, I started this interview?

Simon: Errr.... I think so.

Simon: Good anything else on your mind?

Simon: I was going to talk about messaging Wix twice, but I'd rather talk of something less embarrassing/awkward, now that I think of it.

Simon: Like?

Simon: The fact I didn't email them three times?

Simon: But you emailed someone else as well? That's a total of three times.

Simon: I didn't message anyone four times, though.

Simon: Good for you.

Simon: Right. I think we should end this conversation on a high.

Simon: Couldn't agree more. Only three messages! One of them got answered, too!

Simon: Woop woop! What did the guy say?

Simon: He just gave a link to a troubleshooting page...

Simon: But you didn't want to bother with that?

Simon: No, I'll just use my other Mac to check my site... Oh and one more thing before I go: I just saw a news article saying 'sex with someone outside your house now illegal'. Imagine reading that before the pandemic!

Simon: Great. Bye...