James: Hello, listeners! With me on today's show are Adam and Louis, both members of one of the world's most successful bands, that being Bazookas and Tulips!

Adam: Hello.

Louis: Thank you for having me.

James: You very famously hate each other, what's all that about?

Louis: Adam is really, really racist.

Adam: First I've heard of it.

Louis: You wrote a song about how much you hate French people!

Adam: You said it yourself, it wasn't so much a song, more of a rant!

Louis: Oh. Well, there you go then.

Adam: Would you like me to write a song about how much I hate French people? How about this: I want to punch a Frenchman's henchman?

Louis: I want you to say sorry!

Adam: Look, I'm an artist. It's like in Van Gogh painting a picture of him flipping off a Spanish man. If that's really what he wanted to express to the world, it would be shown in a gallery and admired.

Louis: The very thought that you're comparing yourself to Van Gogh!

Adam: Goths do.

Louis: What?

Adam: I said goths compare themselves with Vincent Van Gogh. Which is fitting as I'm kicking you out of my band so I can start a goth band.

Louis: You're kicking me out?? I quit!

Adam: Good. I'll be releasing a new album in the next few months.

James: What will it be called?

Adam: Up Yours Spaniards, by Adam Van Gogh.

Louis: I can't even begin to imagine the album cover artwork…

Adam: It's not so different to the artwork I talked about previously.

Louis: I know. How would you like it if I wrote a song about how much I hate people called Adam??

Adam: Well, how very French of you.

Louis: See, this is what I mean!

Adam: What do you mean?

Louis: You are completely unreasonable!

James: You know what? I completely get you! My relationship with Dan has also been described as unreasonable. So they increased my dose of antipsychotics and now I hate him without hearing voices.

Louis: Well, what an inspiring story.

James: It is for me, the voices were annoying.

Louis: Look, the whole point of me coming here is to tell the world what a moron Adam is. Having said that, you've done that already for me.

Adam: Imbécil.

Louis: I know what that means, by the way. It's more or less exactly the same as the English word.

Adam: I said I liked you in Spanish.

Louis: That would be 'me gustas'.

Adam: Oh right.

Louis: You didn't know?

Adam: I just know how to call people imbeciles.

James: Well you did it well.

Adam: Thank you.

James: Your use of language isn't perfect, though. There are many who say Vincent Van 'Goth' should be pronounced 'Go'…

Adam: What has that got to do with goths?

James: Nothing at all, I really don't think there were any in his era…

Adam: Oh. It's just that judging by his artwork, I was thinking he could like goth music.

James: You know what, I get that actually.

Adam: Oh, if only he played guitar and sang about being sad. Then he'd be an innovative painter and a musician!

James: Yes, and there would be no goth bands like The Cure as the music would have been done already!

Adam: Why is there a goth band called The Cure? What's depressing about being cured? The band should be called 'The Illness'…

James: Yep. I also can't explain the goth band 'Joy Division' or 'Sister of Mercy'.

Adam: They should be Sad Division or Sisters of Sadness?

James: Right. You probably don't want dozens of goth bands with Sad in their band names, though…

Adam: It could be a running joke. Here are some more potential goth bands: Sad Chicken, Sad Shoes, Sad Thumb, Sad Hippy, etc., etc.

James: But goths are too sad to joke…

Adam: Joy Division aren't…

James: Maybe Joy Division means dividing joy? As in chopping it up into pieces…

Adam: Oh yeah, that would be sad. Makes you wonder how and why that would happen, though.

James: Division can also mean a section of an army…

Louis: But is the joy felt by the army or the people they attack?

Adam: It can't be both…

Louis: Lesson of the day: Be clearer goth bands.

James: Ok good, I got you two talking together again! Does this mean the band is getting back together??

Louis: Errrr… I don't know…

Adam: I guess my goth project could be put on hold…

James: Do you have any other songs for Bazookas and Tulips in mind?

Adam: Yes…

James: And does it have anything to do with hating French people?

Adam: … No!

James: Well, that's promising! What's the song about, then?

Adam: Hating Louis!

Louis: But I'm a French person!

Adam: Yes, but you're not French PEOPLE are you?

James: Are you, Louis?

Louis: I guess… I guess not…

James: So are you getting back together??

Louis: Dear God no.

James: Ah. Gone are my dreams of being a councillor.

Louis: You didn't really have dreams of being a councillor, did you?

James: Sure, my face is warm and kind. But now those dreams are gone.

Louis: Don't worry, your warm and kind face can advertise medicine, instead!

James: Yeah! At least I wouldn't make the customers depressed like The Cure do!

Adam: Actually, I'd say you do make people depressed…

James: Not true, I bring people together, albeit temporarily. It was nice whilst it lasted, right?

Louis: No.

James: Oh. You're not really going to start a goth band about hating Spanish people, are you?

Adam: It's better than doing nothing…

James: No, I disagree with you, it's going to ruin relations with America and Spain. What happens if they stop supplying tapas to you?

Adam: Hm.

James: Yeah, you think about that.

Louis: And that's the reason you don't want a war with Spain, Adam?

Adam: It’s one of the reasons.

Louis: What’s another reason, then?

Adam: No more sombreros!

Louis: But you don’t even own one!

Adam: I want the option.

Louis: See listeners! This is the kind of person I’m dealing with!

Adam: What can I say? I like tapas and sombreros.

James: Well, whether that last comment will mend relations with America and Spain, I guess we’ll have to wait and see. Would you like to end this show with something else Spain have got to be happy for?

Adam: I like Pantera!

James: Well, they may not be Spanish but it is a Spanish word and that will have to do. Bye listeners!
