

Let's discuss the different months of the year! All have their strengths and weaknesses right? But what could they be? Let's go!!!

January

Pros: I genuinely don't think January has any good traits, whatsoever. Not a great way to start the year, is it?

Cons: Christmas has just ended, so everyone is on a comedown (apart from Christmas-hating monsters); the weather is horrible; trees look leaf-less and scary; shoes get muddier; you need to scrape ice off your car as you freeze as well, I'm mean come on...

February

Pros: Apparently February 5th is World Nutella Day. Great if you like the food, I guess. But isn't it megalomaniacal inventing a yearly event just for yourself? Part of me wishes I could, but at the same time, that would make me feel genuinely awkward. I wonder how many similar organisations try the same idea? Guinness day, Vodka day, Cadbury's day, you can see unhealthy that would be. Personally, I'm happy with pancake day. And that's a healthy attitude! You don't want everyone throwing up all the time. Then again, the Romans liked to binge, and they did pretty well. Well not really, they had all sorts of health problems. If you measure success based on the amount of people you enslave, you're not a nice person. Sorry for going on a ramble, but the world is going mad. Oh yeah, and February has no flies! Same goes for January, I guess. Whoops.

Cons: This month's almost as bad as January, but at least it's shorter.

March

Pros: Speaking of megalomania, it's time for you sweet old mother to be the most important person on Earth on mother's day. Thankfully your mum won't be above the law though, that would be too far. I'm thinking of that film called 'The Purge'. :S Luckily all my mum ever asked for was chocolates. Phew!

Cons: Well, it's March at the time of writing, and I can't think of anything good to say about it. Then again - lockdown. In a normal year, what's good about the month? Probably nothing, again. (Apart from a lack of flies). Turns out 'Pi Day' is on 14th March. Yeah, you try saying the whole number. It will go on for more than a day. NEVER say pi. I'm serious, it will just keep going on and on and you'll be miserable.

April

Pros: I do like the mild April weather, and boy do I like Easter. So does everyone. Apparently members of parliament in many countries build huge statues of themselves made out of chocolate, and the winner is the one who eats quickest. Isn't that crazy? April fools!

Cons: Flippin' April fools day.

May

Pros: Eurovision! Also, I just found out World Laughter day is on 3rd May. Sounds a bit dumb to me, but it's certainly better than World Anger Day. That doesn't bear thinking about, it simply must never become a thing. World Bee Day is on 20th May? This is getting ridiculous now. I'm never going to celebrate something that has stung me before, just as I'm not celebrating World Thief Day. World Turtle Day is on 23rd of May? This is getting unbelievable.

Cons: The UK never wins Eurovision. I think Eurovision is a con in both senses of the word! Isn't that witty? I spent a lot of time on that one. (Really because I couldn't think of anything else bad to say about the contest. I love it so much. Well it passes the time. No, it's better than that, I like it, that's not so bad. Ramble power!)

June

Pros: World Milk Day is on 1st July. I'm not making this stuff up, I'm getting these facts from eparenting.co.uk. It's some of the trippiest stuff I've ever read. You know what? I like milk, but I couldn't drink it for a whole day; look at it for a day; talk about it all day, etc. and I can't imagine why anyone would. Someone's thinking of ideas at random aren't they? Sausage Roll Day is on 5th June... I mean... Yeah. More famously, it's time for your megalomaniac father to take things to new levels on Father's day. To me that sounds like madness. Hide the board games, things could get out of control.

Cons: Wait, is Father's day a pro or con? Could go either way, I guess. Whisky isn't known to be an effective treatment for power tripping but my dad does like a bit of whisky every now and then which I think is fine. I guess it would impair his thinking ever so slightly, making him easier to defeat. The thing is, I don't really care about board games.

July

Pros: Birthday month! Wooohoo! Time to go go-karting. Apparently Harry Potter's birthday is in July, too. There have been some comparisons made between me and the fictional character. I'm not magic or anything, (as far as I'm aware, maybe I should try things out) I think it's because I wear glasses. But then again, MAYBE it is because I am actually magic. Oh yeah, I've just remembered my no medication day is in March, but I can't say I've noticed an effect in me. Let's not alter my old March paragraph though, it's time to move on. My monologue, my rules.

Cons: Cons?? In birthday month? Come on. It's also time to buy new clothes and music. :D (Ok, stupid flies).

August

Pros: Left handers day! Now we're talking. THAT'S a good thing to celebrate. You know what, being compared to the devil can effect your self esteem, especially if you go mad and think you ARE the devil. (Lefties are much more likely to get schizophrenia). So you can see how the event isn't silly? Makes a lot more sense than Rice Pudding Day on 9th August.

Cons: I really don't like boiling alive in my bedroom at all. World Lion Day is on 10th August, so be prepared. (I'm honestly not making this stuff up!!)

September

Pros: It's Hobbit Day on 22nd September! Why? Because that's the birthday of Bilbo and Frodo Baggins! It's also Talk Like A Pirate Day on 19th September! Why? No reason! Great!

Cons: The holidays are over and it's back to school! I remember when I was a child, and we got six weeks off in the Summer. Talk about lazy children, now. As children aren't so badly effected by Coronavirus, this whole situation is kind of a win win for them. Makes you wonder if they secretly invented it. Who are these shifty 10 year old geniuses spreading pandemics?

October

Pros: World Teachers Day? Have any workers done any less work? Makes you wonder how big World Nurse Day would be. I'm all for grand celebrations, but partying all year? A bit intense. Then the nurses would have to deal with all the vomiting, then they'd be super-respected again, they'd be more nurse parties, more vomit and it'll just go on and on forever.

Cons: A bit nippy.

November

Pros: Guy Fawkes Night is on 5th November! A day celebrating the torture and execution of a failed terrorist. Ironically, it's followed by World Kindness Day on 13th November. I'm sure both events are fun, but you can't deny they're weirdly timed. Unless there's someone out there who thinks torture is kindness. That would be truly alarming. How would such a person act when he's cruel? (Coughs) Satan!

Cons: Oh my God! Christmas! I'm so excited! So far away though!

December

Pros: Come on. Do I have to spell it out for you?

Cons: This is the reverse of January. There are no cons.

So, that's all! What's your favourite month? Has to be December, no? But what's the WORST one? Easy. January. Talk about a rollercoaster. Byeeeeeee!
