

Why Hitler Was Wrong

by

Simon Wiedemann

© 2017

We all know Hitler was an evil individual, that's obvious. However, I'm going to discuss the more subtle, interpersonal things that show how the man's thinking was severely clouded. (Or perhaps 'the lizard's thinking' for those into conspiracy theories). Why? Because the smaller things often get overlooked, due to the huge atrocities he was infamous for, such as starting all out war, and such. Plus, some of the stuff he said was so crazy it was actually kind of funny, making it ideal for me to write about. Don't believe me? Read on...

We start things off with the quote that has stuck with me the most. It goes (something) like this: 'People want to feel terror and to be totally submissive'. That's a weird one, isn't it? I certainly don't want to feel terror, or know anyone who does. In fact, I would go to great lengths to avoid the feeling. Maybe I misheard the quote as 'people DON'T want to feel terror...' That would make sense, but it's kind of obvious. Why would anyone say THAT? After doing some checking, the dictator did indeed say the former. Maybe he said that as part of Germany's social conditioning. For example, 'I'm going to constantly scare the shit out of you with endless ranting, and I know this sounds crazy... But you'll love it! :D' Something like that. Everyone believes him, and he gets put into a position of huge power.

Moving on, we have: 'If you tell a big enough lie and tell it frequently enough, it will be believed.' Sounds about right. Ok, here is another weird one: 'I follow my life with the precision and security of a sleep walker'. What the FUCK does that mean? He keeps bumping into things? Maybe he unconsciously opens the fridge at night and takes out some snacks, only to find he's put on a little weight in the morning? I can only speculate. And how can you follow your life? That one has me truly stumped. However, this one actually makes sense, in a way: 'How fortunate for governments that the people they administer don't think'. Easy to understand, but evidently, he was wrong. I for one, am onto you.

Here's yet another crazy one: 'The great masses of the people will more easily fall victims to a big lie than to a small one.' What? Why? You can't just say things like that without giving examples. Which of the following lies about me would you believe?: 'I invented the Welsh language', or 'I've never eaten two apples in a day, before'. Whilst false, you would believe the second one, wouldn't you? Of course you would. Next up, we have 'who says I am not under the special protection of God?' You serious? Ever heard of 'thou shalt not kill'? Imagine God's horror at the whole genocide thing. I'm sure that God never would have imagined he would have had to create such an insane eleventh commandment all those years ago. 'Thou shalt not commit genocide... Na... No one would ever do that', God must have thought.

Ok, one more. 'Anyone who sees and paints a sky green and fields blue ought to be sterilised'. Jesus Christ, is there anyone this guy did like? I understand disliking political opponents and maybe people who look at you funny, so do I, but what's wrong with a little artistic innovation? Is that really so offensive? Just imagine a day in Hitler's life. He gets out of bed, and then 'AAAARGH!!! The sheets are the wrong colour!!!!' He looks out the window and then 'AAAAARGGGH!!!! The sky is the wrong shade of blue, it's more grey than blue!!!! AAAARGGHH!!!' Etc., etc. If that was really his mindset, I guess it was inevitable that he started WW2.

Ok, I think that's enough. Hopefully if you previously liked Hitler, I have shown to you what he really was, and you now will be donating your copy of Mein Kampf to the local library's silly section. If you thought there was a global Jewish conspiracy to take over the world (and not a German one), maybe now you've seen the light. Maybe you have come to the conclusion that whilst Jews such as Amir Blumenfeld may be annoying in a funny kind of way, they are in no way evil. If that's the case, give yourself a pat on the back and treat yourself to a fun dreidel based game. And that's all, from me! Byeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeee.