

Now I'd like to apologise to Judas Priest for saying that they want the end of the world. They have sung about the end of the world, and lyrics and writing in general do give an insight into the writer's soul, but I've written about countless people exploding after eating expired food, do I really want them to explode? I mean it's a funny image, but after weighing up the pros and cons I thought to myself 'No, that's wrong.' So there you go, nothing to worry about! Similarly, I don't want people to turn into pizzas after eating the same food. Yes, I like the thought of even more pizza being available, but again, after weighing up the pro and cons, I thought to myself 'Simon, what the (expletive) is wrong with you?' Do I want villains to turn into fish, though? Yeah! As in, 'you're the most ruthless killer I have ever come across and thus, you have earned the harshest punishment possible. You are now a fish.' Now that gene therapy technologies are getting more advanced, maybe that means people will get punished that way in the near future. Good. More petty criminals could get turned into kittens. Still annoying, but animals with more worthwhile lives, I think. As in 'You robbed a shop! Are you a cat lover?' 'No...' 'You don't even love kittens?? What kind of monster are you?? You'll get a much less severe sentence if you do say you love kittens, as it will make you look kinder!' 'Fine, I love kittens.' 'Good, because now you are one.'

Here's a chilling statistic: 'There are approximately 1.78 million police recorded theft offences in England and Wales annually.' Well... where would all the cats go? The government could try and change the culture and promote the eating of cats, but that would mean robbers get a bizarre form of the death penalty. It's too far and it's not fair, that's what should happen to murderers. Let's ask A.I. what would happen if criminals get turned into cats... 'It would drastically alter the prison system'? No surprises there, but what WAS a surprise was the tone of the article which suggested it wouldn't actually be that bad an idea. In another search it was pointed out that it would be a massive problem if people were paid a million dollars to have a baby, which was Kanye West's idea. That means I'd make a better politician than him! However, it is more practical to just give people the money than to change their species (at least for now) so maybe I have a long way to go before I lead the country. Let's ask A.I. what would happen if criminals were turned into fish... Wow, THAT'S a bad idea?? It would cause the collapse of society? Fine, just turn them into cats then, that's fine. Let's go even more extreme and ask what would happen if criminals were turned into dinosaurs... Again, it would cause complete chaos. Again, I'm wondering what's so special about cats.

A.I. says turning people into cats is a physical impossibility, but I think running a marathon in under two hours is a physical impossibility, it's actually hard to run that fast for over 30 seconds! This may seem like strange writing, but I think the runner proves people can be turned into cats! If anything, I think the running speed and distance is even crazier, no one thought it was possible. What I'm saying is, so called 'facts' get disproved all the time. So there you go scientists, work on how to turn people into kittens but not fish, that would be mad. Let's go in the complete opposite direction and ask A.I. what would happen if robbers get rewarded for their crimes... There would be outrage? Interestingly there wouldn't be outrage if felons get turned into animals including dinosaurs, further proving some of my ideas aren't as bad as they first seem! However, I guess that rather than spending billions on how to change species, maybe a cure for cancer would be better. As in 'Prime Minister Simon drastically cuts cancer research so he can turn felons into kittens and fish'.

Schizophrenia is a cruel disease. Fortunately missing your medication by accident is a true impossibility as it would give you the roughest sleep imaginable. And you thought homeless people freezing in Winter whilst high on crack have bad sleeping sessions... And on that crazy note... bye!