

Dan: Helloooo listeners!

James: Hello.

Dominant Egg: Howdy.

Ben: Hi.

James: Sorry for impersonating a teacher, again.

Dan: Ah. You beat me to it.

DE: Yes, and sorry for getting drunk at a party and dominating a bunch of partiers...

Dan: Assault! It's called assault, Charlie!

DE: What happens when people get assaulted?

Dan: What? Oh I see where this is going...

DE: Right, they get dom...

Dan: Shut up, Charlie!

DE: Excuse me??

Ben: Dan's just trying to say lots of people are getting angry at the way you behave...

DE: What do you mean?

Ben: It's really, really aggressive. And annoying, too.

DE: You call it aggressive when I quote unquote 'assault' as many people as possible, I call it competitive.

James: You didn't dominate as many people as I did at the school.

DE: See, told you Ben. I'm normal.

Ben: And how did you dominate people, James?

James: I dominated the teachers by the school gates by tricking them into thinking I was another teacher.

Dan: FOR THE LAST TIME STOP WITH THIS LANGUAGE!! WE'RE ALL SICK OF IT!

James: You need to dominate your emotions, Dan.

Dan: WHAT???

James: Control them!

Dan: COMING FROM YOU???

Ben: At very least dominate does kind of mean control...

Dan: Don't side with him!

Ben: I'm just saying it's not gibberish. In a weird way, I find that comforting.

James: Ah so you find gibberish scary?

Dan: I do, too.

James: Well, well, well, after all this time...

Dan: What? What's after all this time?

James: So I never needed to crash your car to get to you, all I have to do is say something like this... wait a second...

Dan: James, I'm warning you...

James: Trouser language access hand...

Ben: I see you've just used an online word generator...

James: Right. Feel ok, Dan?

Dan: No comment.

James: Here we go again: Trouser language access hand.

Ben: They were really words from the internet?

James: Sure were...

Ben: It's just that it really sounding like you access your trousers with your hand. Need to pee? Maybe whilst talking to your trousers? Something like that?

James: No, that's a coincidence.

Ben: Ok.

DE: That would be weird.

James: Well it's not what happens, so...

DE: Are you sure?

James: The way I pee is completely normal. The suggestion I can't even go to the toilet like the rest of the population can is extremely offensive.

DE: You've just been dominated, James.

James: No you haven't dominated me, I've dominated Dan.

Ben: Who the hell is dominating who?? I can't keep up!

DAN: STOP!!! STOP THIS MADNESS, I CAN'T TAKE IT ANYMORE!!!

DE: But I'm the Dom...

Dan: NO!! NO, CHARLIE!!!

DE: But...

Dan: NO!!!

Ben: Charlie, maybe you should stop referring to yourself as the Dominant Egg for a while. Again, it's getting annoying...

Charlie: But I'm starring in a film all about dominating people...

Ben: When will it be released?

Charlie: Sometime next year, maybe?

Ben: Great! Dominate people next year. But for now? Maybe you could be the friendly egg?

Charlie: But that's more or less the opposite of being dominant...

James: I have to say I'm surprised how little attention has gone to my illegal school trespassings...

Ben: Well, that's a matter for the courts.

James: No you're wrong, I've just been told stay in my mental home more...

Ben: Why aren't you there now?

James: THAT'S for the courts to deal with.

Ben: Of course. And what did you do other than trespass?

James: I had a very interesting conversation with the children about language.

Ben: I see. And how did that go?

James: Something like this: 'Why are you talking like people from the 1920s, children?' Then I was told to get lost.

Ben: And what was very interesting about that?

James: I was assuming I'd get told to scarper.

Ben: Why?

James: Oh, long story...

Ben: Take your time.

James: Ok. It's just that school children in my day used to say things like 'Oh my days', which is a very old fashioned phrase, even back then. Where does it go from there? It gets more extreme, doesn't it? It's just what happens in life. It's like with shoes. First women wore perfectly reasonable shoes, then stilettos came along with the really long heels, now women walk with wooden blocks on their feet that are a metre high.

Ben: I've never seen that before.

James: That's what the women in my mental home wear.

Ben: Why??

James: I really don't know. Fashion?

Charlie: It's a great way of dominating short people.

Dan: Right, you've had enough warnings from me Charlie, I want you to leave.

Charlie: But...

Dan: No, I'm sorry. Go.

Charlie: But what about James??

Ben: He has a good point, Dan. If it's just us two left in the studio what will we talk about?

James: Right, exactly. If it wasn't for me and Charlie, all you would have said is 'hello listeners.'

Charlie: And of course, Lego.

Dan: Nope, Lego aren't sponsoring us anymore. They've finally snapped.

Charlie: Really? So what IS this podcast supposed to be about, then?

Dan: Spaghetti.

Charlie: Really? Any particular brand?

Dan: Alan's Spaghetti.

Charlie: Who's Alan?

Dan: Just a chef...

Charlie: Maybe we should talk about the food, now?

Ben: Sounds like a good idea to me.

James: I sure would like some of Alan's spaghetti...

Ben: James, that was brilliant!

Dan: I have to second Ben's comment. That really took me by surprise...

James: I wonder what will happen if we talk about Lego...

Dan: You'd probably get sued.

James: Oh. Doesn't matter though, as I don't want to play with any Lego. What I do want is some of Alan's brilliant, delicious spaghetti.

Ben: That was flipping amazing!

Charlie: Can I have some? I heard it's unbelievable...

Ben: Yes! Alan's spaghetti for everyone!

Charlie: But we can't dominate it?

Dan: Nope. No you can't.

Charlie: I'd say eating a food WAS dominating it...

Dan: Yes, but I'd say eating food was eating it. That's what the word 'eating' is for. There are others, too. You have 'devouring', 'consuming', 'ingesting'...

Charlie: Well as we're running out of time, I say I dominate food.

James: That was beautifully timed, Charlie. I'd like to see you get kicked off the show, now.

Dan: I just won't invite him back...

James: No, it's not up to you, it's up to Alan and his spaghetti company. And Charlie has done a damn fine job promoting them.

Dan: Bye, listeners.