

Simon: Hello! Anything catch your eye, lately?

Simon: Yep, I saw a very interesting numberplate. At least I thought it was at first.

Simon: Very exciting. Almost. How long did it take you to notice it?

Simon: I think a split second... :O

Simon: And how long does it take for you to notice speed limits?

Simon: Far longer. Sometimes I miss them. Go at most 30 mph and you should be fine. (No, really).

Simon: I see. And what was the numberplate?

Simon: Well I THOUGHT it was M0A8 PWN, but I later realised that's not a proper numberplate, as the two numbers should come after the first two letters. But the numberplate I saw was ALMOST what I thought...

Simon: So what?

Simon: Do I have to spell it out for you?

Simon: Yes...

Simon: Mother of all bombs, pown.

Simon: Actually that would be a cool plate.

Simon: Told you. I don't know if I mentioned it on this site (I certainly did on Facebook), but I genuinely saw a plate saying 'APE' followed by a word rhyming with 'hit'. It was just spelt with a 5 and a 4 representing the H.

Simon: No...

Simon: I'm serious. God knows how that was allowed. I wouldn't have shared that story here, but the guy clearly needs attention.

Simon: Not necessarily, maybe he's just telling people he's... Well you know.

Simon: Just a harmless form of self-expression?

Simon: Exactly. Noticed anything else?

Simon: I bought a drink saying 'ready to drink' on it.

Simon: Why did it say that?

Simon: I don't know. There was nothing special about it. Granted, I thought one of the ingredients was 'paint' for a split second, but then I realised it was plant and vegetable concentrates.

Simon: Any more facts about your uncle?

Simon: He's Super Mario.

Simon: Wow. He's a plumber then?

Simon: Yes, but there's more to him than that. He rides a dinosaur and is a real adventurer. And of course he loves spaghetti.

Simon: That's fascinating.

Simon: Ikr?

Simon: What are your favourite lyrics?

Simon: Slipknot have some interesting lyrics...

Simon: Oh no.

Simon: No, it's ok, it's not offensive. At least I think it's not offensive... Actually it might be.

Simon: Go on...

Simon: Their song 'Eeyore' goes 'I'M ON, YOU'RE NOT!!!' I just think it's a strange thing to shout to someone. Judging by the delivery, it kind of sounds like a thing to shout in a road rage incident. Or rather Slipknot's perception of road rage.

Simon: I'm on, you're not?

Simon: It does sound a BIT weird.

Simon: So if someone got mad at you for driving too slow, that's what Slipknot would think someone would say to you?

Simon: I guess...

Simon: Has anyone ever said that to you?

Simon: Nope.

Simon: Anything else on your mind?

Simon: Now that I've written so many Lego podcasts, I'm getting Lego adverts...

Simon: But you never talk about Lego in your podcasts.

Simon: I mention it briefly though, and apparently that's enough.

Simon: Do you get adverts about people going crazy and turning into pigeons?

Simon: The latest ad I saw on my site was promoting eBay. I can't recall any ones about pigeons and such.

Simon: Can you buy pigeons on eBay?

Simon: I'll have a look.

Simon: ...

Simon: No, you can't.

Simon: What about crazy people?

Simon: That would be far weirder. Sinister, even.

Simon: Of course. In another interview, you said you want space to be really big, yet you don't like the thought of infinite multiple universes. I should have said at the time, but I can't for the life of me work out what you mean.

Simon: Ah. I do apologise. What I meant was how can anyone even dream of exploring something that's infinite? At least you can fantasise about building space ships that bend space and can get anywhere in the universe instantly. Again, how the flip are you going to explore EVERYTHING?

Simon: Ahhh. Has anything disappointed you recently?

Simon: Yes, my brother's wife has been diagnosed with Covid. I'm sure she's going to be completely fine, but that does mean I won't be able to go to a miniature railway station with my brother's family on Halloween, as planned. I could ask to do so with a friend, but that would be a very odd thing to say.

Simon: I think going to a miniature railway station on Halloween is a great idea for anyone...

Simon: I know! :(

Simon: Let's end things here, it will create pathos. Great writing.

Simon: If you think so.

Simon: :)

(A day passes)

Simon: Hello! I understand you've just dropped your car off and walked home from a car repairing place...

Simon: Yep. Whilst in the area I got myself a panini.

Simon: Good?

Simon: Not really. I had to wait ages for it, because the ingredients were 'fresh' but I've had cheap paninis in school and they taste exactly the same for less than half the price. They were made a lot quicker, too. Also, I ordered 'hash browns', but really it was ONE hash brown and it wasn't even that good. If the cafe was honest and called their products 'school dinners' I wouldn't have minded.

Simon: Wow, you got powned. MOAB powned.

Simon: Yes, THAT'S powned.

Simon: Anything cheer you up?

Simon: A little later, I saw a really tacky car on sale for an absolutely obscene amount of money. Then I realised the 'price' was the phone number to contact the seller. The zero at the start of the number should have been a giveaway. I've never seen any amount of money start with a zero. Not above 99p, anyway.

Simon: You mean you've seen £0.99?

Simon: Exactly. I've seen that.

Simon: Just not £010?

Simon: There we go.

Simon: You know what? That story cheered me up, too.

Simon: It was a good'n.

Simon: Anything else on your mind?

Simon: I've just received a new CD in the mail, and have consequently rearranged my CD collection...

Simon: Good CD?

Simon: Yes, it's emo. A bit shouty though. If I want shouty music, I'll listen to Slipknot. Sometimes I want to listen to melody.

Simon: I guess the band are just showing their emotions...

Simon: You can say that about any band. Would you call Slipknot emo? They shout to express their emotions...

Simon: I dunno. Maybe...

Simon: I'll Google if Slipknot are emo, then.

Simon: ...

Simon: Here's what the internet says: 'No, just no.' I think that's pretty clear, don't you?

Simon: Whoops. What CD did you get, then?

Simon: Cap'n Jazz.

Simon: Are you sure it's not jazz music?

Simon: I'm fairly sure, yes. Even jazz at its most avant-garde doesn't sound like the band.

Simon: Is it about captains, then?

Simon: I don't think so...

Simon: Wow, none of the band's name is right...

Simon: Hang on... An anagram of Cap'n Jazz is 'C Japan zz'. As in 'See Japan Snore'. The album was ordered from Japan.

Simon: Do you see Japan snore, though?

Simon: No, but I could see a person from Japan snore if I visited the country...

Simon: If you visited the country and spied on someone as they slept?

Simon: Right.

Simon: Well... For the sake of your law abiding reputation, I think it's best to end things here.

Simon: I understand. Byeeeeeeeeeee.

Simon: -_-