

Simon: Hello! Watched any good Youtube videos?

Simon: I like watching videos that debunk Flat Earthers and I chuckle a lot of the time, but really I don't understand what the scientists are going on about for the most part. Funny delivery, I guess.

Simon: You must understand some of what's being said?

Simon: I fully understand the concepts of 'flat' and 'spherical', but light refractions and all that?? The sad truth is, many Flat Earthers know more about science than me. On the plus side, I'm more than confident that if I left Earth in a space ship, I'd see a globe. It's not much, but it is better than what some people believe.

Simon: You're a very likeable person. Ever wondered how to get people to like you even more?

Simon: Apparently if you ask people to do things for you, they like you more because they tell themselves being nice to you wasn't stupid. I literally can't think of a better and easier way to get people to like me. EVEN MORE.

Simon: Could work. Could make you look like a sponger.

Simon: A nice sponger?

Simon: More like an exploitative one.

Simon: Are you sure?

Simon: That's what it sounds like to me. Go too far and it would be harassment.

Simon: Likeable harassment?

Simon: What's that?

Simon: It's hard to describe...

Simon: Please try.

Simon: Maybe shouting at people that you like them.

Simon: And why would you do that?

Simon: I dunno, mixed feelings? On another note, Facebook asked me if I wanted to update my password. I mean not really, I think it's a fairly good password.

Simon: Maybe they were just checking? To get you to like them?

Simon: I guess they were asking me to do something for them...

Simon: Actually having thought about it, I would say they were asking you to do something for yourself.

Simon: But I didn't want to.

Simon: Just drop it. If you want to be more likeable to other people, be nice to THEM! Drop these crazy theories, they can get you into serious trouble!

Simon: I really have to be nice to other people?

Simon: YES!

Simon: Wow.

Simon: What's wow?

Simon: Jeez, that's tough. You serious?

Simon: Yes, I am.

Simon: Ok. If anything that's crazier than the idea I heard about.

Simon: No it's not.

Simon: I see. I thought I saw a car saying 'Steve-O' on the back, actually it said 'Stelvio'. That makes sense, as who'd want the former? Sounds extremely dangerous. Sounds like the kind of car that crashes itself for fun.

Simon: I can see how driving a car like that would be an upsetting experience...

Simon: Yes. On another car I saw '70d'. I can't even get my head around the fourth dimension, but the 70th?? THAT'S technology.

Simon: Any idea what the car did?

Simon: Nope. I'd just say it was being driven and that's all...

Simon: By an astronaut or mad scientist?

Simon: Didn't check.

Simon: Shame.

Simon: On the subject of cars, I kept my dates (as in the food!!!) locked in my car...

Simon: You kept your dates locked in the car?

Simon: Yes, that does sound bad. Sounds like kidnap and two timing at very least. But it wasn't. As I was saying, I kept my dates as in the food, locked in my car, so my dad didn't steal them. In doing so, I made a great discovery: Sun heated dates taste MUCH better. Like a legit dessert, I'm 100% serious.

Simon: Very inspiring. Anything else inspiring?

Simon: You know what my favourite word is?

Simon: What?

Simon: Pronoid. It means that you think people are conspiring to help you! Isn't that a funny thought? Sadly it's made up though, I think by the Monty Python team, or something like that. They call themselves comedians, but with a bit of research and more confidence, they could make an interesting psychological discovery. I'm sure some people must think other's are hacking their computers and spying on them to help them.

Simon: And how about something not so inspiring for the sake of variety?

Simon: I saw on Facebook a post where someone made a DIY and basically rubbish looking bridge across a small river. However, the video didn't say how long it was and I couldn't skip any of it. It could well have lasted over an hour, and I wasted 15 minutes of my life watching it. I was thinking 'JUST WALK ACROSS THE DAMN BRIDGE AND FALL IN THE WATER!!!' I had to stop watching as a mild form of protest. Never again. >:(

Simon: Seen any funny adverts, lately?

Simon: Dear God, yes. I saw on TV the best Twitter promotion of all time...

Simon: Go on...

Simon: Gordon Ramsey himself told people to go to Twitter and use the acronym of 'Future Food Stars'. Why? I'm not 100% sure.

Simon: FFS?

Simon: Yep.

Simon: You are joking?

Simon: No joke whatsoever.

Simon: Huh.

Simon: If Gordon Ramsey is reading this, here's another suggestion for him: Winning Food Trendsetters.

Simon: WTF?

Simon: Exactly.

Simon: Is that all you have to say?

Simon: Sure is. Bye!
